RESEARCH FINDINGS _____ 15

Mitchell is vehemently opposed to school vouchers, despite going to one of the most prestigious Dallas private schools growing up. School choice for her but not for you. _____ 16

Mitchell’s response to the Dallas Morning News candidate questionnaire concerning what criteria lawmakers should use to assess the effectiveness of the ESA program on educational outcomes was nonsensical and likely AI-generated. Unlike her other questionnaire responses, it is lengthy, impersonal and doesn’t mention Texas. _____ 18

Mitchell wants to increase the minimum wage to “yield significant gains in the health of our consumer economy.” _____ 21

Mitchell: “Our pro-business stance too often benefits corporations over consumers in the name of job creation and stability.” _____ 22

Mitchell really should have been more specific when she had AI do her homework. What does the Texas legislature have to do with interest rates? _____ 23

Mitchell supported all four ballot propositions in the successful 2026 Dallas ISD bond election totaling over $6.2 billion dollars. It is the largest school district bond proposal in Texas history. _____ 24

Mitchell shared a vulgar woman, Heather Shaw, making fun of conspiracy theorists doubting the story of Artemis 2 space mission, but the mockery belies her disdain for raw milk, the Bible and vaccine skepticism. Shaw is a lesbian comedian who said for a man to kiss the feet of Jesus Christ “sounds pretty gay.” _____ 28

Mitchell shared a clip of Bernie Sanders denouncing billionaires. Do HD 108 residents want Bernie Sanders style socialism? _____ 31

Mitchell thinks the “video evidence” shows the shooting of Renee Good was not justified, even though she hit the ICE officer with her car and did not follow orders. _____ 32

Mitchell opposes ICE and immigration enforcement. _____ 33

Weak on Border Security. Wants to punish property owners for cooperating with border security initiatives by making them pay higher taxes. Mitchell voted against Prop 17 in 2025 even though she admits that it's good that it "it incentivizes investment in border security" and "would foster more cooperation from landowners." _____ 35

Weak on Border Security. Mitchell thinks Texas has "extremist border policies" and that Texas shouldn't spend money on border security because that would be "a costly band aid to a bigger problem." Instead, Mitchell sees this as a federal issue and supports "comprehensive immigration reform at the federal level"—something that hasn't happened for over a decade... in the meantime Texas should just let drugs and traffickers cross into our state. _____ 37

Mitchell's only tweet on her campaign X account is the day after Charlie Kirk's assassination, during which she attacks "MAGA" for worshipping a "false god" because Trump blamed "the left" for Kirk's death. _____ 39

Central to Mitchell's personal story is that both of her two children "were both born with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and experienced severe speech delays – her son in particular, who is nonspeaking." However, she mocks people genuinely concerned about vaccines and denounces RFK, Jr. _____ 40

Mitchell wants wife-beating illegal immigrants in our country. Mitchell shared a video saying "Bring Kilmar Abrego Garcia home," after he was deported to his home country, El Salvador. She then gets into a comment battle with a guy who said "he is home tho" (she didn't get the humor). _____ 42

Mitchell supports "reversing this harmful rollback of DEI policies." _____ 46

Mitchell will use special needs kids to guilt you into accepting antiwhite, anti-Christian, anti-American "diversity, equity and inclusion" (DEI) training and curriculum. Mitchell wrote: "DEI also covers special needs education." This is how the left sells wokeness to the suburban moms. _____ 47

Mitchell's children's book, It's hard for me to talk, features a hijab-wearing Muslim girl with a service dog and the only clearly white adult male is the mean guy. _____ 48

Despite being an autism/special needs advocate, Mitchell doesn't think there has been an increase in autism in recent decades, claiming "Autism has always been a part of humanity, it only seems more prevalent now that we have the research, science, therapies, and evolved mindset to support these individuals." _____ 50

Despite being an autism/special needs advocate, Mitchell buys into the mainstream narrative that vaccines have no correlation or any causal effects on autism. This goes against the anecdotal evidence have many other parents of autistic children. She falsely claims that "all" real scientific studies found “no connection.” Her liberal derangement syndrome makes her incapable of seeing outside the mainstream paradigm or any validity on the other side. __ 52

Mitchell: “Parents are superheroes, but parents of Special Needs kids are going to save the world.” _____ 54

Mitchell supports legalizing gambling in Texas. The Adelsons/Las Vegas Sands have already stated that they want to open casino resorts in DFW. _____ 55

More apartment development, more traffic, your community’s voice stifled. Mitchell supports SB 840 saying she “was pleased to see” the bill pass saying the “benefits outweigh its potential drawbacks.” Dallas officials and neighborhood groups were opposed to SB 840. Her Republican opponent voted against the bill and the related SB 15. The bills inhibit local control and support was interestingly not strictly partisan. Importantly these bills only apply to populous urban and suburban municipalities, like the DFW metro area. _____ 56

Mitchell supports expanding Medicaid in Texas, and supports “universal healthcare”, at the same time she claims she wants to maintain “fiscal responsibility and limiting government spending.” During a May 2026 Instagram “town hall” Mitchell said: “I’m a proponent of universal health care. Lot of countries do it, and hopefully I can push that issue when I get into the legislature.” _____ 67

Mitchell wants to legalize psychedelics: “I’d be all for it.” _____ 70

Mitchell: “hate to say it, but THC is illegal in Texas, we are not planning on moving forward to make it legal, and actually they’re planning to tighten things up even more...You know, I’ve always said, make it legal responsibly and use the tax revenue, so that’s what I think. And I hope that we can get to that point.” _____ 71

Mitchell called the loss of Democrats’ ability to racially gerrymander districts “a huge loss”. 73

Who does Mitchell look up to as an example of great state governance? Failing Democrat Governor of Illinois J.J. Pritzker. _____ 74

Mitchell was very active on social media and at polling locations for the 2025 Constitutional Amendment election (the first she has ever voted in). She created a “cheat sheet” opposing nine of the seventeen propositions. All seventeen passed. _____ 75

Mitchell supports higher property taxes. Mitchell opposed Prop 13 that increased the homestead exemption. Mitchell even admitted that Prop 13 would be a “substantial tax relief for homeowners.” Shockingly, Mitchell said in a video that she wants “the average taxpayers to have as much tax relief as possible.” That was your chance. _____ 78

While voting against and publicly advocating against the most meaningful property tax break put to voters, Mitchell has the audacity to also tell the Dallas Morning News that she wants “a meaningful reduction in property taxes.” _____ 80

Mitchell supports more taxes on financial transactions and voted “No” on Prop 6 in 2025, even though she acknowledges that this would help Texas be competitive and pro-business. Mitchell thinks increasing pathways for more tax revenue is more important than enticing industries to move and/or stay here in Texas. She dismisses Prop 6 as “born out of the idea of trickle-down economics.” _____ 82

Mitchell supports more taxes and doesn’t want the Texas state constitution to protect Texans from having to pay taxes even when you die. Mitchell voted against Prop 8 banning the legislature from imposing death taxes, complaining the amendment would “make it very difficult to ever impose a wealth or property transfer tax should we ever need to in the future.” Yea, that’s kinda the point... _____ 84

Mitchell wishes Texas could impose capital gains taxes. Mitchell opposed Prop 2 claiming that it only helps the wealthy—I guess she doesn’t think middle class people own stocks or properties. _____ 86

Weak on crime. Mitchell campaigned against Prop 3, which required bail to be denied for certain violent felonies. George Soros also opposed Prop 3. Mitchell wants judges to allow murderers out on bond while awaiting trial even when the evidence shows they pose a significant risk to public safety or the judicial process. Not doing so “borders on unconstitutional.” This proposition was necessary to combat weak-on-crime Democrat judges who let criminals off too easy, but Mitchell thinks Dallas has “an incredible DA and many wonderful precinct judges.” _____ 88

Mitchell told the Dallas Morning News “Public Safety and Crime” is one of her top three priorities: “I support law enforcement and know our local police officers work tirelessly to address the many challenges that come with living in a large city.” Despite campaigning on supporting law enforcement, Mitchell contributed to Soros-backed Dallas County District Attorney John Creuzot in 2025. _____ 93

Mitchell opposed Prop 12 in the 2025 Texas election, despite admitting that it would lead to “more transparency and accountability from judicial candidates.” _____ 99

Mitchell opposed Prop 5 which provided tax breaks for animal feed inventory, even arguing that it would lead to more taxes on the average consumer. Tell us again how you want to run on “affordability.” _____ 101

Anti-business. Mitchell states “We have enough corporate tax breaks in this state.” _____ 103

Mitchell supports woke indoctrination, refuses to codify parental rights. Mitchell voted “No” on Prop 15 in 2025, Mitchell dismisses Prop 15 is just a “response to the fear mongering rhetoric.” Mitchell makes the contradictory claim that it’s not necessary because Texas already recognizes parental rights and then claiming (without explaining) that it will be used to hurt children and undermine “inclusive school curriculum” and doctors. _____ 105

Two, contradictory Personal Financial Statements. Mitchell submitted a Personal Financial Statement in February 2026 for calendar year 2024. She filed another Personal Financial Statement in March 2026 for calendar year 2025. In the first statement, Mitchell disclosed her husband’s employer (JP Morgan) and stocks. In her second statement, Mitchell does not disclose anything about her husband’s income or holdings. Mitchell also claimed on both filings she had no interest in real property, despite owning her Dallas home. _____ 107

Mitchell is Jewish and posts culturally Jewish content. After the Bondi Beach shooting in Australia, Mitchell wrote “Attacking Jews on our holy days is a way to steal our joy and put us in a state of fear. Well, I refuse. I’ve seen attacks on my community my entire life - I’ve even been a target of them.” Mitchell doesn’t provide any further detail on these personal attacks. _____ 113

In May 2024, Mitchell called for an Israeli ceasefire, posting the watermelon emoji and stating “Israel’s survival should not come at the cost of tens of thousands of civilian lives, children’s lives. As a Jewish person, this is my stance. Disagree if you want, but I cannot support the murder of children in pursuit of Hamas.” _____ 116

In a December 2024 post, Mitchell claimed Israel is committing a “brutal genocide in Gaza.” _____ 117

Mitchell’s campaign treasurer is her father, neurosurgeon Dr. Richard Weiner. _____ 118

Along with her sister Susan, Mitchell is listed as a manager on the formation papers for a Texas business created by her father that has faced a tax forfeiture. The company, PNS Future Management, LLC was formed in 2020, and its existence was forfeited in 2022 for noncompliance. _____ 120

Allison Mitchell reported on her Personal Financial Statements for 2024 and 2025 that she was on the board as treasurer for the nonprofit The Collective School Project. However, the Collective School Project was only formally organized in January 2026 as a nonprofit entity. According to Facebook activity, the co-founders started the organization in October 2025. 122

Wendy Davis is fundraising for Mitchell. Mitchell has contributed to Planned Parenthood’s Texas PAC. _____ 125

Mitchell made contributions to “Leaders We Deserve” the PAC created by David Hogg, a prominent gun control activist. The PAC’s focus is helping young Democrat candidates. Leaders We Deserve has Zohran Mamdani on its homepage as an example of the candidates they support. _____ 127

Mitchell contributed to Elizabeth Ginsberg. Ginsberg has been a candidate twice in the past for HD 108 and lost each time and is now running for District Court judge. _____ 132

Mitchell contributed to the Funky East Dallas Democrats (FEDD) PAC. The FEDDs are known for their mission of “TURNING TEXAS BLUE” _____ 133

Mitchell is supported by Stonewall Democrats of Dallas which supports trans surgery for minors but she claims “bathroom bills” is not an issue Texans care about. _____ 137

In 2023, Mitchell went to a Design Industries Foundation Fighting AIDS (DIFFA) fundraiser and posted a video of half-naked male go-go dancers and another video of herself showing how she was amused by them. Under the guise of fighting AIDS, DIFFA promotes the radical politics of BLM and transgender ideology. _____ 143

Now that she’s running for office, Mitchell is hiding her progressive virtue signaling pronouns in bio. _____ 148

What exactly does Mitchell by “lifelong Texas resident.” She was born in Galveston but has lived in Chicago, St. Louis, and recently Massachusetts. _____ 149

38% of Mitchell’s campaign contributions have come from her dad. He also helped the Mitchells buy their Dallas home in 2019. _____ 156

Allison's story starts right here in House District 108

Allison Mitchell is an experienced and successful entrepreneur and children's book author with deep ties to House District 108. A proud Texan and native Dallasite, she graduated from The Hockaday School and launched and built a successful namesake line of women's accessories. Allison credits her Dallas community with giving her business its solid start – from early mentorship to ongoing support.

Her passion for creativity and storytelling also led her to write and publish her first children's book that celebrates diversity, resilience, and the power of kindness – values that mirror her vision for Texas.

Allison knows that people are what drive progress – not broken policies or partisan gridlock. She believes that the best way to serve constituents is by listening first and leading with empathy. That means focusing on policy and legislation that meets the basic needs of every Texan: affordable healthcare, fully funded public schools, safe neighborhoods, and economic opportunity for all.

She's committed to building a future where families can thrive, small businesses can flourish, and every child – regardless of zip code – has a fair shot at success. Allison's approach is rooted in common sense, collaboration, and a deep love for the community that raised her and where she is proudly raising her family.

Allison is an avid volunteer with organizations that serve intellectually disabled children and adults. Though she has always felt called to serve these special people, it wasn't until after the birth of her two children, who were both born with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and experienced severe speech delays – her son in particular, who is nonspeaking – that she saw her connection to the disability community come full circle. As DISD parents, Allison and her husband, Ryan, are staunch advocates for excellent public education, regardless of socioeconomic position or support needs.

When Allison is not volunteering and advocating, she is busy with the filming of her documentary about disability inclusion, watercolor painting, gardening in her organic vegetable garden, cooking for her family and friends, and being a mom to her two young children.

Allison Mitchell

Inspired by her own two children and their journey through early childhood interventional therapy, Allison is passionate about the inclusion and integration of neurodiverse and disabled children into their schools and communities. Her first children's book, "It's Hard For Me to Talk," is a love letter to her own children, as well as a tool to help educate and expose typical children and their families to the world of disability and neurodivergence.

Early in her parenting journey, Allison saw a great need for community among families with neurodiverse and disabled members. Her books, reading events, and speaking engagements foster outreach and connection between families in the disability community and their neighbors.

Allison lives in Dallas, TX with her husband, Ryan, and their two children, Amelia and Henry.

DALLAS OBSERVER

Allison Mitchell was a chef in Napa Valley, working in the kitchens of some of the most prestigious restaurants with menus full of foods that are difficult to pronounce and too intimidating to ask how. Then she became a luxury handbag designer with a showroom in New York City, a feature in Vogue and a calendar full of late-night calls with European artisans. But now, Mitchell, who looks like a typical Northwest Dallas mom on her way to grab the kids from school, is parked outside early voting locations, with an explainer sheet on the 17 propositions Texas voters will see on their uniform election ballot and a sign that says “All in for Allison.”

Mitchell launched her campaign as the Democratic candidate for House District 108, which represents the Park Cities and parts of Richardson in the Texas House of Representatives. Without any political experience or even a law degree, Mitchell isn’t scared. She says she’s done hard things before, and she plans on doing them again.

“When I decided to run for this, I already knew that [politics] was a tough world, but I’ve been tested already in those ways,” she said. “I just didn’t see it as a problem, and I could be really useful in the Texas Legislature.”

Research Findings

Mitchell is vehemently opposed to school vouchers, despite going to one of the most prestigious Dallas private schools growing up. School choice for her but not for you.

- ◆ Mitchell is strongly opposed to school vouchers, citing it as the main reason to run for the Texas House.

Mitchell, a Hockaday graduate, has a six-year-old daughter enrolled in the Dallas Independent School District and a four-year-old son with autism who is non-verbal. When Gov. Greg Abbott greenlit school vouchers earlier this year, she decided enough was enough.

“A lot of people say they’re surprised that my issue is public education because I come from private education,” she said. “But what I say to them is, I was very lucky. I got an incredible education. I had a lot of opportunities at my fingertips, and I was very lucky. Seeing that it is not available to all children, it is wrong.”

Mitchell says programs for special education children are likely to be the first affected as public schools lose taxpayer funding to the voucher system.

“Good education should be available to all children. Texas is in the bottom half of education. We’re also one of the wealthiest states with the most uninsured, with the least funded schools, and there’s no reason why we can’t change that.”

Unlike her other questionnaire responses, it is lengthy, impersonal and doesn’t mention Texas.

- ◆ Mitchell’s response to the question has only criteria following her statement that “The criteria should be multipronged and comprehensive including” before starting a new list.

Allison Mitchell:

The criteria should be multipronged and comprehensive including:

Mitchell wants to increase the minimum wage to “yield significant gains in the health of our consumer economy.”

◆ Mitchell told the Dallas Morning News:

Texas has a powerful economy. What steps do you advocate to increase the state’s economic power?

Allison Mitchell:

Texas has the second-largest GDP in the nation, driven in large part by our powerful oil and gas industry. While energy fuels exports and investment, it is our strong consumer economy that ultimately funds the state. Economic health, however, cannot be measured by GDP growth alone—Texas reported growth three percentage points above the national average last quarter—but must also be evaluated through indicators such as the wealth gap, poverty rates, uninsured rates, employment levels, and education rankings to provide a data-driven snapshot of our economic health and trajectory.

Texas has one of the fastest-growing wealth gaps in the country, some of the highest poverty rates, and ranks in the bottom half nationally for education, with inconsistent access to funding and quality across the state. These trends point to a weakening consumer economy and a destabilized middle class. Our pro-business stance too often benefits corporations over consumers in the name of job creation and stability. Without meaningful support for consumers—through wage growth, reduced cost of living, housing affordability, and responsible interest rates that protect against inflation—our economic future is not sustainable.

An increase in the minimum wage, coupled with targeted small-business tax breaks to offset pressure on the service industry, is a modest step that could yield significant gains in the health of our consumer economy. Beyond that, a meaningful reduction in property taxes, along with increased investment in the Texas Permanent School Fund to raise per-student spending, should be top priorities to ensure long-term economic strength and sustainability.

These trends point to a weakening consumer economy and a destabilized middle class. Our pro-business stance too often benefits corporations over consumers in the name of job creation and stability. Without meaningful support for consumers—through wage growth, reduced cost of living, housing affordability, and responsible interest rates that protect against inflation—our economic future is not sustainable.

An increase in the minimum wage, coupled with targeted small-business tax breaks to offset pressure on the service industry, is a modest step that could yield significant gains in the health of our consumer economy. Beyond that, a meaningful reduction in property taxes, along with increased investment in the Texas Permanent School Fund to raise per-student spending, should be top priorities to ensure long-term economic strength and sustainability.

Mitchell supported all four ballot propositions in the successful 2026 Dallas ISD bond election totaling over $6.2 billion dollars. It is the largest school district bond proposal in Texas history.

Dallas ISD trustees send $6.2 billion bond proposal to voters

On Thursday, February 12, the Dallas ISD trustees sent a $6.2 billion bond proposal to voters in May. The proposal has been developed over the past year with the help of the Citizens Bond Steering Committee, whose members were appointed by the board.

If approved by voters, the $6.2 billion bond would:

- build 26 brand-new replacement schools at these campuses
- renovate and modernize all campuses (see proposed scope by campus)
- remove the district's 700 remaining school portables (used by nearly 10,000 students)
- upgrade safety and security at all campuses
- update school furniture
- upgrade student technology and purchase new school buses
- upgrade physical education facilities
- repair the district's swimming pools

- ◆ Mitchell made a video supporting the bond and hosted a Community Information Session with Lance Currie. Currie and Mitchell concede there is a tax increase, claiming it's a "one cent tax increase" (of course one cent on the rate per $100). However in the forum, Currie states "but [your taxes] are going down because of continued tax compression and expanding the homestead exemption. That your taxes will actually go down even if we do pass this bond. Yes, they'd be even a penny lower if we didn't pass it, but it's still the lowest in the area."

Weak on Border Security. Wants to punish property owners for cooperating with border security initiatives by making them pay higher taxes. Mitchell voted against Prop 17 in 2025 even though she admits that it’s good that it “it incentivizes investment in border security” and “would foster more cooperation from landowners.”

- ◆ In a video that’s part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting “No” on Prop 17:

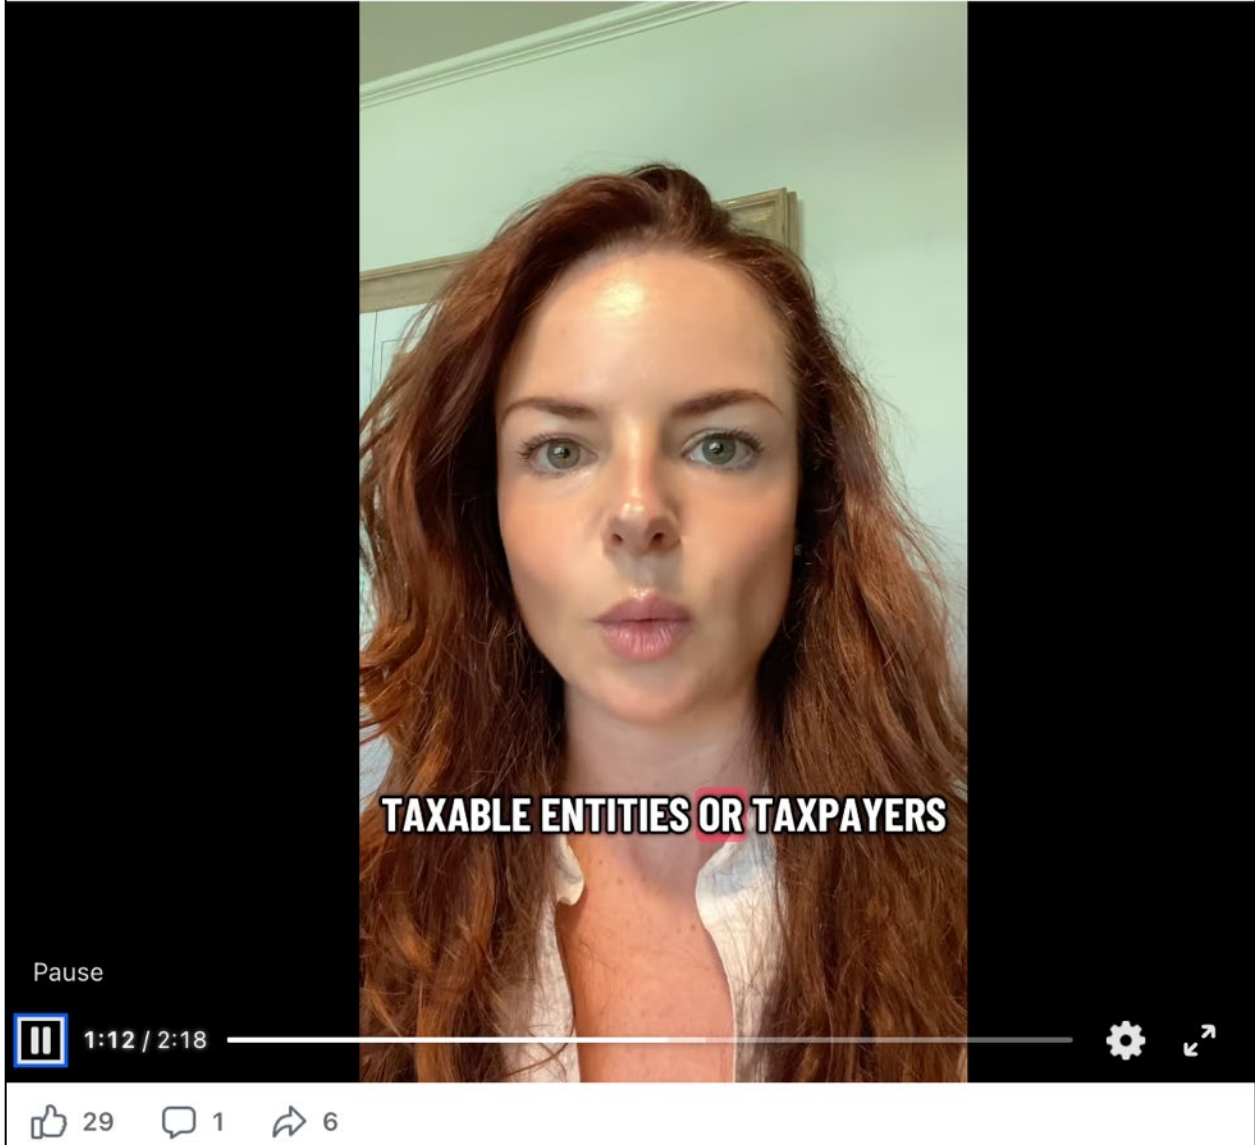

Prop 17, Border Security tax breaks. Should we exempt from property taxation the value added by border security improvements in counties that border Mexico? A pro for this is it incentivizes investment in border security. Another pro is it would foster more cooperation from landowners to allow border security infrastructure development. Con is the loss of revenue cost would shift to other taxable entities or taxpayers. Another con is it aligns with the extremist border policies that we have in this state and pushes fear of immigrants, I think that expensive investment in border security is a costly band aid to a bigger problem. We need comprehensive immigration reform at the federal level to improve processing capacity and infrastructure. Improving our federal immigration system would reduce the pressure on border states. Immigration is not just a Texas issue. It affects our entire country. So the question I have about propositions like this is, will we see our taxpayer dollars reimbursed by the federal government for investing in border security development? We already put taxpayer dollars and some federal grants towards border security development and codifying funding for it seems to me like a decision that's made out of fear of immigrants, instead of addressing the larger problem, which is immigration reform. I'm going to vote no on prop 17.

Weak on Border Security. Mitchell thinks Texas has “extremist border policies” and that Texas shouldn’t spend money on border security because that would be “a costly band aid to a bigger problem.” Instead, Mitchell sees this as a federal issue and supports “comprehensive immigration reform at the federal level”—something that hasn’t happened for over a decade... in the meantime Texas should just let drugs and traffickers cross into our state.

Mitchell’s only tweet on her campaign X account is the day after Charlie Kirk’s assassination, during which she attacks “MAGA” for worshipping a “false god” because Trump blamed “the left” for Kirk’s death.

The screenshot shows the X profile of Allison Mitchell for Texas State House. The profile header includes a back arrow, the name "Allison Mitchell for Texas State House", and a search icon. Below the header, it indicates "1 post". The profile picture is a circular image of Allison Mitchell, a woman with long brown hair, smiling. Central to Mitchell’s personal story is that both of her two children “were both born with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and experienced severe speech delays – her son in particular, who is nonspeaking.” However, she mocks people genuinely concerned about vaccines and denounces RFK, Jr.

Allison is an avid volunteer with organizations that serve intellectually disabled children and adults. Though she has always felt called to serve these special people, it wasn’t until after the birth of her two children, who were both born with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and experienced severe speech delays – her son in particular, who is nonspeaking – that she saw her connection to the disability community come full circle. As DISD parents, Allison and her husband, Ryan, are staunch advocates for excellent public education, regardless of socioeconomic position or support needs.

When Allison is not volunteering and advocating, she is busy with the filming of her documentary about disability inclusion, watercolor painting, gardening in her organic vegetable garden, cooking for her family and friends, and being a mom to her two young children.

DHS Reveals Second Domestic Abuse Filing Filed by Kilmar Abrego Garcia's Wife

Release Date: April 30, 2025

So-called "Maryland Dad's" Track Record of Violence

On Wednesday April 30, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) revealed that the wife of Kilmar Abrego Garcia — the so-called "Maryland Dad"—filed a petition for protection against him in 2020.

"The facts are clear: Kilmar Abrego Garcia is a violent illegal alien who abuses women and children. He had no business being in our country and we are proud to have deported this violent thug," Assistant Secretary Tricia McLaughlin said in a statement. "We have now found two petitions for protection against him, in addition to the fact that he entered the country illegally and is a confirmed member of MS-13. Our country is safer with him gone."

According to the petition filed by Jennifer Vasquez on August 3, 2020, in the District Court of Maryland for Prince George's County, Garcia verbally abused her, kicked her, slapped her, shoved her, mentally abused her kids, locking them in their bedroom while they cried, and detained Vasquez against her will. In November 2019, Vasquez alleges that Garcia grabbed her by the hair while in a vehicle. In December 2019, she states Garcia grabbed her from her hair in the car and dragged her out of the vehicle--abandoning her in the street. In January 2020, Vasquez claims Garcia broke her son's tablet and broke doors in their house. In March 2020, she alleges that Garcia pushed her against the wall while breaking phones and TVs.

This newly released petition was filed in 2020, prior to the petition Vasquez filed against Garcia 2021. In that filing, Vasquez claimed he bruised, punched, and scratched her while ripping off her shirt.

DHS has previously revealed that Garcia was involved in a suspected human trafficking incident, is an MS-13 gang member, and had been accused of domestic abuse on at least one other occasion. Still, the media continues to call him a victim while ignoring the real victims: the women he battered, the children he terrorized, and the communities he endangered.

- ◆ Mitchell shared a headline from an AP News story about Robert F Kennedy and autism. She called RFK Jr's goal to determine the causes of autism as "absolutely absurd."

 allisonmitchellofficial Absolutely absurd. This is not how science works, but it is how one sets the stage to fabricate disinformation and propaganda. Autism has always been a part of humanity, it only seems more prevalent now that we have the research, science, therapies, and evolved mindset to support these individuals who can give so much to our world.

Let me be clear: as a parent of an autistic, nonspeaking child, of course I want to know the causes of his condition, because that can lead us to more helpful therapies that allow him to thrive in a world that wasn't designed for people like him. But the research must be conducted by trained, experienced experts, not people who are pushing an anti-vax, mistrust-of-healthcare-professionals-narrative. When did people stop believing in science and start believing in conspiracy-pedaling grifters?

- ◆ Mitchell's argument that "Autism has always been a part of humanity, it only seems more prevalent now that we have the research, science, therapies, and evolved mindset to support these individuals" may certainly explain the increased diagnosis of autism, in part. But severe or "profound autism" has also increased; this type of autism wouldn't go undiagnosed. A major CDC study (using ADDM Network data from 15 U.S. sites, 2000-2016) found:

- Profound autism prevalence roughly doubled from about 2.7 per 1,000 (early 2000s) to 4.6 per 1,000 8-year-olds in 2016 (1 in 218 children).
- This represents a substantial absolute increase, but the proportion of all autism cases that are profound has decreased (to ~26.7% of ASD cases) because milder cases have risen much faster.

First Large Study of “Profound” Autism Finds Rising Problem With Disparate Impacts

Rutgers Health, 05/09/2023

Despite being an autism/special needs advocate, Mitchell buys into the mainstream narrative that vaccines have no correlation or any causal effects on autism. This goes against the anecdotal evidence have many other parents of autistic children. She falsely claims that “all” real scientific studies found “no connection.” Her liberal derangement syndrome makes her incapable of seeing outside the mainstream paradigm or any validity on the other side.

- ◆ On March 25, 2025 Mitchell posted the headline of an attack piece by the Washington Post about the hiring of David Geier.

allisonmittellofficial Quick reminder that real scientific studies are conducted by real scientists who are unbiased towards results. Hiring a vaccine skeptic to conduct a government-funded study that seeks to debunk the over 100 studies previously conducted (by real scientists) on connections between vaccines and autism (all studies found no connection) is quite literally how one fabricates propaganda. - ◆ Mitchell supports SB 840 saying she "was pleased to see" the bill pass saying the "benefits outweigh its potential drawbacks." In her Dallas Morning News questionnaire, Mitchell states:

– In the last session, the Legislature passed SB 840 to make it easier to build housing on underutilized commercial land. What do you think of the bill? What else could lawmakers do to encourage housing for moderate- and middle-income Texans?

Allison Mitchell:

I was pleased to see a bill pass through the Legislature aimed at lowering housing costs and expanding housing supply—an urgent need for many Texans. While concerns about limited local control, uneven impacts across cities, and potential strain on infrastructure are valid, I believe the bill's benefits outweigh its potential drawbacks. We have seen many examples in which increased multifamily construction has put downward pressure on rents and improved housing availability. Ultimately, this bill represents a meaningful first step in addressing our state's affordable housing crisis. As with any policy, we will need to course-correct along the way.

To further support households that earn too much to qualify for subsidies but too little to afford market-rate housing, we should pursue additional measures such as expanding workforce housing incentives, encouraging office-to-residential conversions, improving access to construction financing, and reducing insurance costs.

SB 840: A Game-Changer for Multifamily Development and Land Use in Texas Cities – Zoning Regulation Reform

🕒 3 Minute Read | June 9, 2025 | Legal Update

The Texas legislature recently passed SB 840, which now heads to Governor Abbott's desk for signature. There are distinct advantages for developers who move strategically and quickly to capitalize on this opportunity.

SB 840 stands to be one of the most transformative legislative changes affecting how certain Texas cities regulate multifamily housing development as it: (i) opens existing developed sites and projects for multifamily development; (ii) clears regulations that may require zoning district reclassification or amendments, exceptions, or variances approvals to a particular zoning district; (iii) eases the ability to convert existing buildings intended for commercial use into multifamily uses; (iv) causes municipalities to assess, evaluate, and respond to this new paradigm shift which will impact adopted comprehensive plans and city development and growth plans; and (v) leaves cities to navigate infrastructure challenges which will likely result in a rollout of new local rules designed to navigate the bill's impact.

At its core, the bill allows multifamily housing to be built or existing buildings to be converted in areas zoned for commercial, office, warehouse, retail, or mixed-use without the need to rezone (as rezoning can be, and frequently is, opposed by surrounding communities) – essentially allowing multifamily housing use by right.

George C. Fuller · Follow

SB 840, ANOTHER BILL SET TO CHANGE MCKINNEY! Every resident just lost their voice in multifamily development.

SB 840 is unfortunately now law. Like SB6, the annexation bill I have been fighting and speaking about for years that is allowing the proliferation of our ETJ with substandard, non-property tax paying, park or infrastructure contributing development, SB 840 will now overwhelm our incorporated city limits, creating density by right on any and every commercial property, regardless if we have the infrastructure in place to handle it.

I've always believed that local communities should have the right to shape their own future. That means thoughtfully planning where people live, work, shop, and play. Senate Bill 840 undermines that foundation in a way that will have long-term consequences for our community. You can count on it.

SB 840 strips away a city's ability to manage its own land use. It mandates that municipalities “shall allow mixed-use, residential use and development or multifamily use and development” in any commercially zoned area — whether we're talking about office parks, retail centers, or warehouse zones. Translation: developers can now bypass local zoning altogether and build multifamily projects by right, with no input from the community, Planning & Zoning Commission, or City Council.

It gets worse.

The bill also prohibits cities from enforcing many basic standards on those developments. It says we cannot restrict density below 36 units per acre (or our highest current zoning, whichever is greater). We cannot limit building height below 45 feet (or our existing limits, if higher). And we cannot require more than one parking space per unit — no matter the traffic realities of our community.

This doesn't just apply to future rezonings. These new rules override protections for all existing multifamily and mixed-use sites in McKinney.

In effect, SB 840 hands over a massive financial windfall to developers and landowners at the expense of our residents. These decisions — how we plan infrastructure, schools, traffic, and emergency services — should remain with local leaders who understand the needs of their communities. Instead, this bill invites unmanaged density, reduced quality of life, and an erosion of our zoning and planning process.

This isn't about being “pro-growth” or “anti-housing.” It's about smart, balanced planning and preserving the right of cities to guide their own growth responsibly.

SB 840 isn't housing policy — it's a dangerous overreach that will damage our communities for generations.

Texans, just a follow up to bills that have been sent to the Governor that effect cities. Many of these sound good on the surface, but I can guarantee you the community will be in an uproar about some of these, SB 15 and 840 really stand out that it will make your bigger cities flooded with density. Make your voice heard to the Governor's Office. Of course some of them are good bills, like the public notice provisions.

Here are several key bills from the 2025 Texas Legislative Session that have passed both the House and Senate and have been sent to the governor, particularly those affecting municipalities, zoning, elections, housing, and related issues:

- 🏢 Municipal Governance & Zoning
 - H.B. 1522: Requires cities to post meeting notices in publicly accessible places at least three business days in advance. When discussing or adopting budgets, cities must also post a taxpayer impact statement comparing proposed property tax bills with those under a no-new-revenue rate.
 - S.B. 15: Caps minimum lot sizes to 3,000 sq. ft. for greenfield developments (unplatted land of 5+ acres) and creates zoning restrictions for small lots (under 4,000 sq. ft.). Applies to cities with populations over 150,000.
 - S.B. 840: Allows mixed-use and multifamily developments in non-residential zones and limits cities' ability to regulate such developments. Applies to larger cities.
 - S.B. 785: Permits HUD-code manufactured homes in residential zoning districts, overriding some local zoning restrictions.
- 🏠 Housing & Land Use
 - H.B. 2464: Prevents cities from prohibiting no-impact home-based businesses, and limits regulation of other home-based businesses.
 - H.B. 2844: Preempts local authority over mobile food vendors, establishing statewide rules and prohibiting cities from imposing conflicting fees or restrictions.
- 🗳️ Elections & Governance
 - S.B. 506: Grants the Secretary of State authority to review ballot language in initiatives, referenda, and charter elections. Also waives governmental immunity in certain election-related cases.
- 🔨 Code Enforcement
 - H.B. 4765: Limits cities to using only registered individuals for code enforcement unless exempted, and exempts certain licensed professionals from additional registration.

These bills reflect a broader trend in the 2025 session of state preemption over local control, especially in land use, housing, and governance.

This September, a new state law, SB 840, will go into effect, and it's bad news for local control. It lets developers put massive apartment complexes and mixed-use buildings on land zoned for offices, stores, or warehouses without a zoning change, or allowing residents a say. It even blocks cities like ours from setting basic rules on height, parking, or density. In other words: the people who live here will have less say in how our neighborhoods grow.

The City of Irving fought hard against this bill. Local legislators in our area like Sen. Nathan Johnson, Rep. Rafael Anchia, and Rep. Cassandra Garcia Hernandez voted no to protect our community. But my opponent, Terry Meza, didn't. In May, she voted for the Republican-backed plan, siding with Greg Abbott and his special interests instead of the people she represents. She didn't fight for us, instead she handed Austin the keys to the future of our neighborhoods.

I believe Irving families, neighborhoods, and businesses deserve a voice in how our city grows. The attacks on home rule in laws like SB 840 take that voice away. I will fight to put Irving's needs above the GOP Takeover of our state, restore our right to decide what's built here, and make sure our community's growth is shaped by the people who live in it — not dictated by those who don't.

It's time for leadership that stands with Irving, not against it.

- ◆ Many Dallas officials and groups opposed the bill and sought creative solutions for minimalizing its impacts. Jesse Moreno (then involved with the Housing and Homelessness Committee) testified against the bill in Austin in March 2025, representing the City's opposition. He criticized it and similar measures for reducing local control over development.

Despite only becoming law on Monday, its impact has already been felt at Dallas City Hall. Council member Chad West, who represents North Oak Cliff, last month cited SB 840 as a reason to support a rezoning of about 35 acres around the corridor that includes Hampton and Clarendon roads. The city needed Council's permission to incorporate additional design requirements for developments, such as sidewalks, locating parking behind the building, and forcing drive-through businesses to obtain a specific use permit. Getting ahead of the bill meant that developers must now adhere to the city's design standards for this area despite the new options afforded by the state law.

Across town in North Dallas, a neighborhood association had sued over the redevelopment of the aging shopping center known as Pepper Square. Development company Henry S. Miller last March won Council approval to transform the 1977-era complex into a mixed-use project that included 900 apartments. Mayor Pro Tem Jesse Moreno, the former chair of Council's Housing and Homelessness Committee, testified in March against the bill. New Council member Bill Roth, whose campaign was rooted in opposing the Pepper Square redevelopment, last week suggested that the city consider suing to "contest this particular state law directly."

"I'm seriously concerned, and I understand there are folks who are out there who feel like there may be constitutional challenges and other legal challenges to this state law," Roth said.

Mitchell supports expanding Medicaid in Texas, and supports “universal healthcare”, at the same time she claims she wants to maintain “fiscal responsibility and limiting government spending.” During a May 2026 Instagram “town hall” Mitchell said: “I’m a proponent of universal health care. Lot of countries do it, and hopefully I can push that issue when I get into the legislature.”

- ◆ In her Dallas Morning News questionnaire, Mitchell states: “I also believe we must end government overreach within the healthcare system—from repealing legislation that interferes with patient autonomy and a provider’s ability to administer treatment to expanding Medicaid.”

– Should Texas expand Medicaid eligibility? Why or why not?

Allison Mitchell:

Yes, Texas should absolutely expand Medicaid eligibility. The federal government reimburses 90 percent of expansion costs, which would bring tens of billions of federal dollars into Texas over the next decade. Many Texans don’t realize that we already pay these taxes; instead of being reimbursed, our money currently subsidizes other states. Expanding Medicaid is simply fiscal responsibility—and it is a policy widely supported by both our medical community and business community in HD108.

Expansion also reduces uncompensated care, leading to fewer rural hospital closures, fewer unpaid medical bills, and greater stability for working families. Job creation, economic growth, and net positive to neutral impacts on the state budget are additional reasons Texas should expand the program.

- ◆ Mitchell also told the Dallas Morning News: “expand access to affordable healthcare, housing, and childcare, all while maintaining fiscal responsibility and limiting government spending.”

What are the most significant long-term challenges facing your district and how will you address them?

Allison Mitchell:

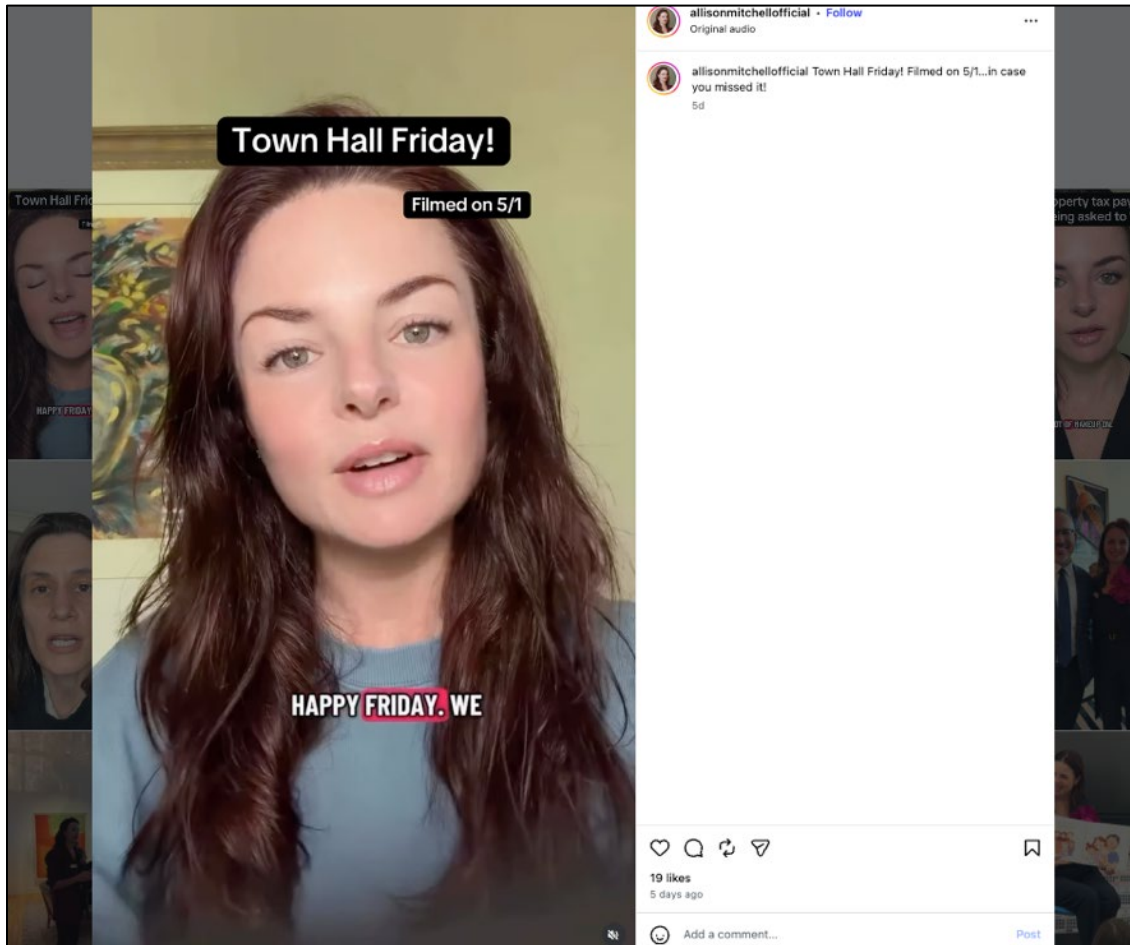

I was raised in this district and continue to live here, and I can say—across the political spectrum—that many of our concerns are shared. Though they may be framed differently, the core issues facing our district come down to public safety, education, and cost of living.

Public Safety and Crime: I support law enforcement and know our local police officers work tirelessly to address the many challenges that come with living in a large city. We need officers who are properly trained to meet these challenges and must continue investing in crime prevention. At the same time, we should expand mental health services, pursue smarter housing solutions, and strengthen community policing—efforts that support both public safety and our police departments.

Education: Our children will always be my top priority. Fully funded schools, competitive teacher pay, early childhood education, and adequate classroom resources lead to opportunity and growth for the entire community. I believe there is no one-size-fits-all solution for our schools, and I plan to address needs such as career-readiness programs and class sizes on a case-by-case basis to limit overspending and ensure efficient use of resources.

Affordability: Affordability remains top of mind for Texans—not just residents of House District 108. We must prioritize economic policies that support consumers, deliver real property tax relief back to taxpayers, and expand access to affordable healthcare, housing, and childcare, all while maintaining fiscal responsibility and limiting government spending.

- ◆ Mitchell: “I'm a proponent of universal health care. Lot of countries do it, and hopefully I can push that issue when I get into the legislature.” (segment begins 0:54)

Instagram, 05/02/2026; video archived here

Mitchell (segment begins 0:11): “Do you support closing the coverage gap to improve access to med and dental so yes. So the bottom line here would be comparing short term cost increase to expand services like Medicaid to cover dental versus long term health and economic gains. I mean, expanding medical coverage alone has strong evidence to cost offsets over time. So I mean the short answer is yes, I don't see why dental should not be included under a medical plan. I mean, the teeth and your health of your teeth are linked to heart issues, diabetes and probably a lot of other stuff that I don't know about because I'm not a dentist or a doctor. But yes, I mean, absolutely, we should close that gap cover everything under one plan. I'm a proponent of universal health care. Lot of countries do it, and hopefully I can push that issue when I get into the legislature.”

Mitchell wants to legalize psychedelics: “I’d be all for it.”

- ◆ Mitchell (segment begins 2:54)

Instagram, 05/02/2026; video archived here

Mitchell (segment begins 2:54): “Do you support psychedelics? What would be required to legalize them in Texas? Yes. I mean, I have read a little bit here and there about these clinics that are micro dosing people for to treat depression with psychedelics. Um, obviously in Texas. So this is a, this is a schedule one drug, schedule one by the federal government. So first you'd have to have the federal government reschedule that drug. But besides the obvious, you know, Texas creating a legal framework, safety guidelines and insurance reimbursement decisions around the drug, you would first need millions of dollars in peer reviewed research to make a case that it's helpful. So I'd be all for it. The question is more, I guess, a political one really, is, can you get the people behind something like that? Because if we can get the people behind it, then usually we have the money.”

Mitchell: “hate to say it, but THC is illegal in Texas, we are not planning on moving forward to make it legal, and actually they're planning to tighten things up even more...You know, I've always said, make it legal responsibly and use the tax revenue, so that's what I think. And I hope that we can get to that point.”

- ◆ Mitchell (segment begins 7:30)

Instagram, 05/02/2026; video archived here

Mitchell (segment begins 7:30): I hate to say it, but THC is illegal in Texas, we are not planning on moving forward to make it legal, and actually they're planning to tighten things up even more. Now, this is a Dan Patrick initiative, so that's something to think about as you cast your vote for the midterms. You know, I've always said, make it legal responsibly and use the tax revenue, so that's what I think. And I hope that we can get to that point.

How do you think the president's executive order to reclassify marijuana as a Schedule III drug will affect THC regulation in Texas?

Allison Mitchell:

Rescheduling of a drug does not override state law, and though a Schedule III drug is less restrictive than a Schedule I, Texas law still controls local regulation. Texas has a very limited medical cannabis program, and marijuana possession and use remain illegal for non-medical purposes under state law. In the short term, quite simply, federal rescheduling will not change the legality of THC in Texas. However, political pressure combined with industry and financial shifts could influence policy towards embracing the THC industry as another source of tax revenue.

Mitchell called the loss of Democrats' ability to racially gerrymander districts "a huge loss".

- ◆ Mitchell (segment begins 5:30)

Instagram, 05/02/2026; video archived here

Mitchell (segment begins 5:30): Can you explain what happened to the Voting Rights Act and why it's a loss for Democrats? Yes. So essentially, what the Supreme Court ruling did is it made it harder for people to use the Voting Rights Act to challenge discriminatory gerrymandering. And that's that's a problem, because now if a state wants to redraw its districts, as long as they say, Oh, this is not about race, this is about politics, it's going to be a lot harder to challenge that in court. So obviously, historically minorities, especially black minorities, they tend to vote Democrats. So this is viewed as a loss for potential seats, flipping from red to blue. But, you know, I say everything is up in the air these days. This is truly historic times we're living in. So I don't know what's going to happen, but it is a huge loss.

Who does Mitchell look up to as an example of great state governance? Failing Democrat Governor of Illinois J.J. Pritzker.

Texas Policy Research 11/05/2025 citing Texas Secretary of State, Unofficial Results, November 2025 Constitutional Amendment Election.

Mitchell supports higher property taxes. Mitchell opposed Prop 13 that increased the homestead exemption. Mitchell even admitted that Prop 13 would be a “substantial tax relief for homeowners.” Shockingly, Mitchell said in a video that she wants “the average taxpayers to have as much tax relief as possible.” That was your chance.

- ◆ In a video that’s part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting “No” on Prop 13 despite admitting that it would lead to a “substantial tax relief for homeowners.”

Prop 13 raise the homestead exemption from 100,000 to 140,000 this would be a $40,000 exemption increase from school district property taxes. A pro of course, is it would mean substantial tax relief for homeowners. Con is, it is a significant loss of revenue to our public schools. Another con is, it shifts the cost to other taxing entities. The state has promised to backfill this loss, but with the vouchers legislation, I am not completely confident that the state intends to fully fund public schools as much as they need to be. I want the average taxpayers to have as much tax relief as possible, but at some point we have to ask ourselves, do we want our children to be educated or not, I'm going to vote no on prop 13.

While voting against and publicly advocating against the most meaningful property tax break put to voters, Mitchell has the audacity to also tell the Dallas Morning News that she wants “a meaningful reduction in property taxes.”

- ◆ In her Dallas Morning News questionnaire, Mitchell states she wants “a meaningful reduction in property taxes” to grow the economy.

– Texas has a powerful economy. What steps do you advocate to increase the state’s economic power?

Allison Mitchell:

Texas has the second-largest GDP in the nation, driven in large part by our powerful oil and gas industry. While energy fuels exports and investment, it is our strong consumer economy that ultimately funds the state. Economic health, however, cannot be measured by GDP growth alone—Texas reported growth three percentage points above the national average last quarter—but must also be evaluated through indicators such as the wealth gap, poverty rates, uninsured rates, employment levels, and education rankings to provide a data-driven snapshot of our economic health and trajectory.

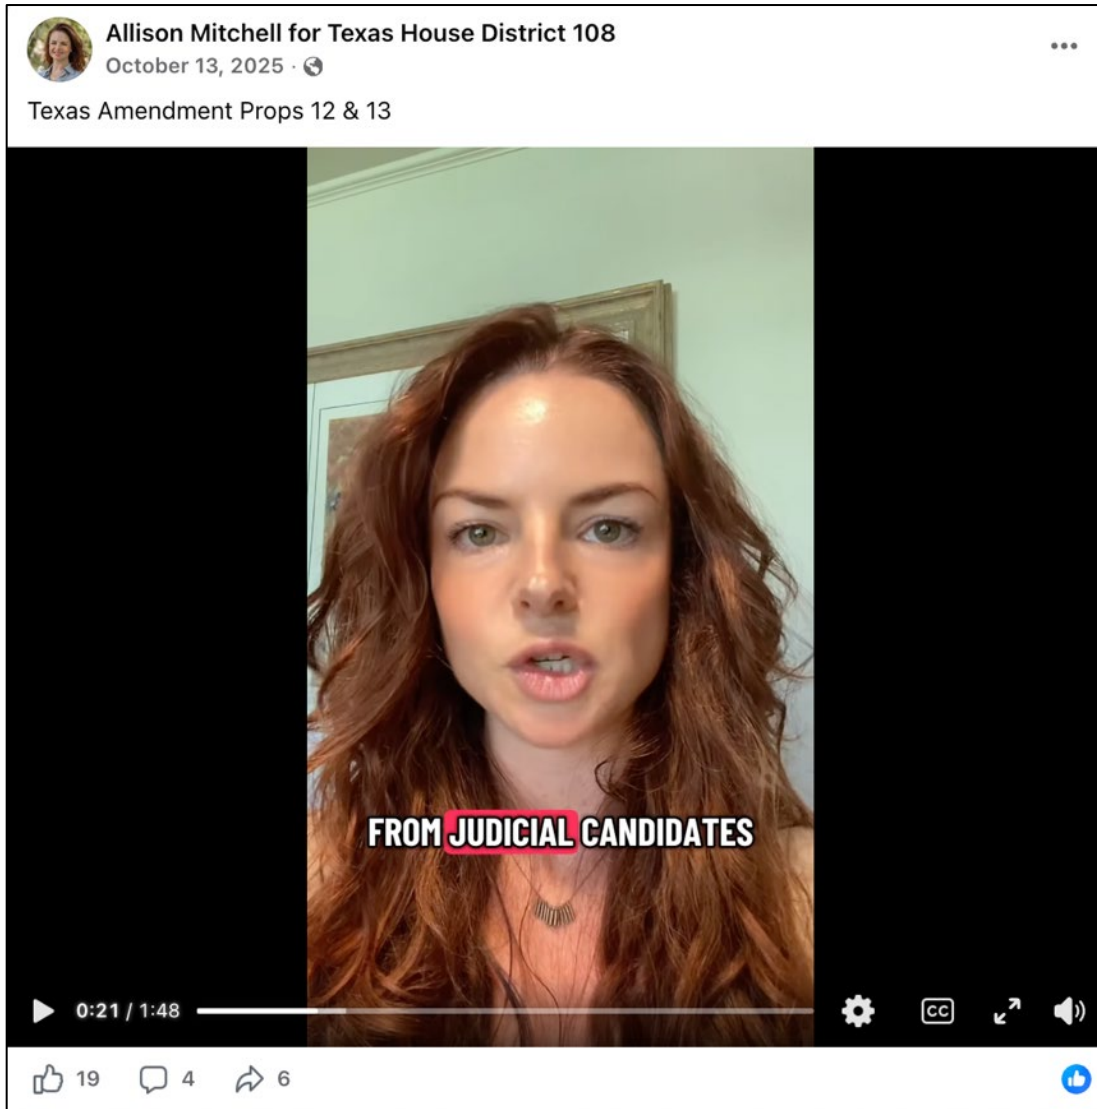

Texas has one of the fastest-growing wealth gaps in the country, some of the highest poverty rates, and ranks in the bottom half nationally for education, with inconsistent access to funding and quality across the state. These trends point to a weakening consumer economy and a destabilized middle class. Our pro-business stance too often benefits corporations over consumers in the name of job creation and stability. Without meaningful support for consumers—through wage growth, reduced cost of living, housing affordability, and responsible interest rates that protect against inflation—our economic future is not sustainable.

An increase in the minimum wage, coupled with targeted small-business tax breaks to offset pressure on the service industry, is a modest step that could yield significant gains in the health of our consumer economy. Beyond that, a meaningful reduction in property taxes, along with increased investment in the Texas Permanent School Fund to raise per-student spending, should be top priorities to ensure long-term economic strength and sustainability.

- ◆ However, In a video that’s part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting “No” on Prop 13 despite admitting that it would lead to a “substantial tax relief for homeowners.”

Mitchell supports more taxes on financial transactions and voted “No” on Prop 6 in 2025, even though she acknowledges that this would help Texas be competitive and pro-business. Mitchell thinks increasing pathways for more tax revenue is more important than enticing industries to move and/or stay here in Texas. She dismisses Prop 6 as “born out of the idea of trickle-down economics.”

- ◆ In a video that’s part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting “No” on Prop 6 despite admitting this would be pro-business and entice investment in our economy.

Proposition six, a ban on future taxes for security transactions. Should Texas prohibit future state laws that tax securities transactions like stock trading fees or financial transactions. Now keep in mind, Texas does not have a personal income tax, and that means no capital gains tax. This would prevent new financial and occupational taxes targeting capital markets. A pro for this is it keeps us competitive, so we would be attracting more brokerages, FinTech firms and trading platforms also aligns with Texas's stance as a pro business state. A con is a ban on these taxes would mean missed revenue for the state, and again, shifting the tax burden on other tax revenue sources and the average taxpayer. Another con is it favors the financial sector, which already enjoys a privileged tax status in this state, all these tax cuts for larger corporations are born out of the idea of trickle-down economics. I would say trickle-down economics has been disproven over the past 50 years. Typically, shareholders get to see that extra money before it's dispersed into the pockets of employees or regular taxpayers. This would keep the tax burden again on the shoulders of the average taxpayer, and as we are in late stage, capitalism, continuing down this road is unsustainable. I'm going to vote no on Prop six.

Mitchell supports more taxes and doesn't want the Texas state constitution to protect Texans from having to pay taxes even when you die. Mitchell voted against Prop 8 banning the legislature from imposing death taxes, complaining the amendment would "make it very difficult to ever impose a wealth or property transfer tax should we ever need to in the future." Yea, that's kinda the point...

- ◆ In a video that's part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting "No" on Prop 8:

Prop number 8: ban the legislature from imposing a state tax on an estate or inheritance. Now, we currently do not have estate or inheritance taxes, so a ban on imposing this tax would make that permanent. The pro for this obviously, would be protection of property and wealth transfer. A con would be that it favors a small group of wealthy citizens and it does nothing to fix our tax issues, as with the banning of capital gains tax proposition, this would also make it very difficult to ever impose a wealth or property transfer tax should we ever need to in the future? Basically, it does nothing to take the tax burden off of the working average taxpayer. The wealthy as well as larger corporations already enjoy a privileged tax status in the state. I don't think that does anything to lessen the burden off of our middle class. And I'm going to vote no on Prop Eight.

Mitchell wishes Texas could impose capital gains taxes. Mitchell opposed Prop 2 claiming that it only helps the wealthy—I guess she doesn't think middle class people own stocks or properties.

- ◆ In a video that's part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting "No" on Prop 2:

Prop number two, no tax on investment gains. This is a ban for future taxes on profits for stocks or property. Texas does not have this tax now, so codifying a ban would make it permanent. So a pro for this would be attracting high net worth individuals or investors to our state. The idea is to retain that wealth for further investment in Texas. The con is it does nothing to take the tax burden off of the working taxpayer. It favors the wealthy, and it can be a volatile revenue stream which is not reliable. Now remember, we already do not have this capital gains tax in Texas. So banning it would mean it would be impossible to impose that tax. Should we ever need to economies ebb and flow, political environments change. So if we exempt the wealthy from ever having to pay a tax to help with our tax issues, we'll have to look elsewhere. I am not in favor of banning capital gains tax permanently, I'm going to vote no.

Weak on crime. Mitchell campaigned against Prop 3, which required bail to be denied for certain violent felonies. George Soros also opposed Prop 3. Mitchell wants judges to allow murderers out on bond while awaiting trial even when the evidence shows they pose a significant risk to public safety or the judicial process. Not doing so “borders on unconstitutional.” This proposition was necessary to combat weak-on-crime Democrat judges who let criminals off too easy, but Mitchell thinks Dallas has “an incredible DA and many wonderful precinct judges.”

- ◆ In a video that’s part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting “No” on Prop 3:

Prop three, denying bail for violent felonies. Currently in the Texas judicial system, offenders of any level can post bail. A pro for denying bail to violent offenders is it would focus our resources on lower risk cases. It also ensures that violent offenders show up for trial. A con would be due process. Concerns keeping someone jailed for a long time without conviction borders on unconstitutional. Another con is it takes power away from the judge when assessing risk and consolidates more judicial power with the state. I believe in our judicial system, particularly in Dallas, we have an incredible DA and many wonderful precinct judges, consolidating power and risking due process, to me, is a step in the wrong direction. I’m going to vote no on Prop three.

- ◆ Despite Mitchell’s spin, Prop 3 was not a blanket bail denial, it was based on SJR 5, which specifically states that bail is to be denied if the DA demonstrates that the accused is likely to willfully skip trial or that the accused is a threat to victims, the public or law enforcement.

Mitchell told the Dallas Morning News “Public Safety and Crime” is one of her top three priorities: “I support law enforcement and know our local police officers work tirelessly to address the many challenges that come with living in a large city.” Despite campaigning on supporting law enforcement, Mitchell contributed to Soros-backed Dallas County District Attorney John Creuzot in 2025.

- ◆ Mitchell: “Public Safety and Crime: I support law enforcement and know our local police officers work tirelessly to address the many challenges that come with living in a large city.”

What are the most significant long-term challenges facing your district and how will you address them?

Allison Mitchell:

I was raised in this district and continue to live here, and I can say—across the political spectrum—that many of our concerns are shared. Though they may be framed differently, the core issues facing our district come down to public safety, education, and cost of living.

Public Safety and Crime: I support law enforcement and know our local police officers work tirelessly to address the many challenges that come with living in a large city. We need officers who are properly trained to meet these challenges and must continue investing in crime prevention. At the same time, we should expand mental health services, pursue smarter housing solutions, and strengthen community policing—efforts that support both public safety and our police departments.

Education: Our children will always be my top priority. Fully funded schools, competitive teacher pay, early childhood education, and adequate classroom resources lead to opportunity and growth for the entire community. I believe there is no one-size-fits-all solution for our schools, and I plan to address needs such as career-readiness programs and class sizes on a case-by-case basis to limit overspending and ensure efficient use of resources.

Affordability: Affordability remains top of mind for Texans—not just residents of House District 108. We must prioritize economic policies that support consumers, deliver real property tax relief back to taxpayers, and expand access to affordable healthcare, housing, and childcare, all while maintaining fiscal responsibility and limiting government spending.

Crime Increases Amid Creuzot’s ‘Reforms’

Eric Geist - Freelance Writer | Sep 9, 2022

SHARE ON

Soon after winning the election in November 2018, Dallas District Attorney John Creuzot announced major alterations to the way that his office would pursue the prosecution of crime in the county. The proposed changes, a significant departure from historical practice, attracted the attention of locals, statewide elected officials, and one of the largest police unions in Texas.

In an April 2019 release, the then-newly elected Democrat announced that he had begun bringing about the “transformation” of the criminal justice system, calling his pursuit of so-called “reforms” during his first 90 days on the job “impressive.”

The Dallas Express, “Crime Increases Amid Creuzot’s ‘Reforms’” 09/02/2022

Among many other items, Creuzot's "reform policies" include refusing to prosecute first-time misdemeanor marijuana offenses, as well as theft of personal items with a value less than $750 that his office deems stolen out of "necessity."

Creuzot's decision had the material effect of selectively ceasing the prosecution of Class C and B misdemeanor theft, as $750 is the threshold for theft to be prosecuted as a Class A misdemeanor under Texas law.

In an interview with the Texas Tribune soon after his policies were announced, Creuzot said, "I've been in criminal justice for 37 years, and I've seen people steal because they're hungry, and I've seen the system react where the cases are dismissed or react in a more harsh manner where incarceration is requested, but the reality of it is putting a person in jail is not going to make their situation any better."

Since Creuzot took office in January 2019, larceny and theft offenses have risen by 11.83%, according to DallasOpenData. So far in 2022, such crimes have increased by 14.40% when compared to the same period in 2019.

Soon after Creuzot's policies were announced, Governor Greg Abbott and Attorney General Ken Paxton issued a joint letter decrying Creuzot's new policies, calling his actions a clear violation of his oath of office to "preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States and this State."

Mitchell opposed Prop 12 in the 2025 Texas election, despite admitting that it would lead to “more transparency and accountability from judicial candidates.”

- ◆ In a video that’s part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting “No” on Prop 12 despite admitting that it would lead to “more transparency and accountability from judicial candidates.”

Prop 12: reform the state commission on judicial conduct. This would give the state commission more power to investigate judicial candidates, and not just sitting judges. A pro for this would be more transparency and accountability from judicial candidates. Another pro is, in order to do this, the state commission would have to be expanded, and if you expand membership that encourages diversity, a con would be concerns about investigative power on political opponents. Another con is if most of the members are of one political party, that partisan oversight could encourage one political agenda over another. We are in a political environment right now where one party has consolidated too much power, I think, until we can get some balance back into our state legislature and more equal representation, the risk of consolidating too much power within the state commission is too high. I'm going to vote no on prop 12.

Mitchell supports woke indoctrination, refuses to codify parental rights. Mitchell voted “No” on Prop 15 in 2025, Mitchell dismisses Prop 15 is just a “response to the fear mongering rhetoric.” Mitchell makes the contradictory claim that it’s not necessary because Texas already recognizes parental rights and then claiming (without explaining) that it will be used to hurt children and undermine “inclusive school curriculum” and doctors.

- ◆ In a video that’s part of her series on the 2025 Amendment Propositions, Mitchell confirmed she was voting “No” on Prop 15:

Prop 15, codifying parental rights. This Prop would codify the parental right to exercise care, custody, upbringing and control of a child. Now those rights are already ones that we recognize in this state for all parents. So, a pro would be the codification of those existing rights and expectations. A con is it conflicts with child welfare and protection. Another con is it could be used to abuse an inclusive school curriculum. There's also a risk of undermining public health and child independence. For me, this prop is a response to the fear mongering rhetoric that somehow our public schools and our doctors are trying to indoctrinate and make your children sick. Also, it really does put at risk children who are in unsafe homes and need a way out. I'm going to vote no on prop 15.

Mitchell is Jewish and posts culturally Jewish content. After the Bondi Beach shooting in Australia, Mitchell wrote “Attacking Jews on our holy days is a way to steal our joy and put us in a state of fear. Well, I refuse. I’ve seen attacks on my community my entire life - I’ve even been a target of them.” Mitchell doesn’t provide any further detail on these personal attacks.

Bondi Beach shooting live: 15 killed in Sydney attack at Jewish event

allisonmitchellofficial Heinous. Attacking Jews on our holy days is a way to steal our joy and put us in a state of fear. Well, I refuse. I've seen attacks on my community my entire life - I've even been a target of them. I know the victims of this shooting and their families do not want us to shutter our windows and silence our feeds: Their memories will now be a part of our celebrations tonight. Hanukkah is the Festival of Lights, light in the dark 🕯️ I grieve for these families as I make dinner for my own family. Tears well in my eyes as I laugh at my kids being silly in the living room. My chin trembles as I cook latkes with my daughter, who pretends we are filming a YouTube video. Joy and grief, and resolute action to change the world 🕊️

In May 2024, Mitchell called for an Israeli ceasefire, posting the watermelon emoji and stating “Israel’s survival should not come at the cost of tens of thousands of civilian lives, children’s lives. As a Jewish person, this is my stance. Disagree if you want, but I cannot support the murder of children in pursuit of Hamas.”

allisonmitchellofficial This is my friend @thatgirlshadia 🇪🇬 Anyone who knows me knows that my identity has been heavily shaped by my Jewish heritage ✡️ Shadia, a Palestinian, and I, a Jew, found our whole hearts one morning last year when we met for coffee. Hamas had just attacked civilians in Israel, and the IDF began its brutal genocide in Gaza. Shadia and I were on different sides, hurting and broken with grief, anger, and fear. As soon as we sat together in the cafe, we let each other in and cried for all of our people. Ever since that day, our friendship has remained a brilliant light in a very dark time. As we brace for the cruelty and oppressiveness of the incoming political regime, the continued apathy towards the Palestinian genocide, and the feeling of being trapped in a crumbling world, Shadia and I will not let go of each other. If you have never reached across the aisle (I also did this with a conservative Christian friend after the election), I encourage you to try. I think you will find much peace, much clarity, and much humanity on the other side, as well as within yourself. Wishing all a peaceful holiday and a very happy new year. Xo

Mitchell made contributions to “Leaders We Deserve” the PAC created by David Hogg, a prominent gun control activist. The PAC’s focus is helping young Democrat candidates. Leaders We Deserve has Zohran Mamdani on its homepage as an example of the candidates they support.

- ◆ Leaders we deserve is a grassroots organization focused on electing young progressives.

Young Progressive candidates face systemic barriers. At every level of government, the average politician is older than the average American. Our political system is stacked against young people – in favor of those who are older, wealthier and white. In 2020, Millennial and Gen-Z individuals only held 21% of State Legislative seats despite representing 45% of the electorate.

Leaders We Deserve is a grassroots organization dedicated to electing young progressives to Congress and State Legislatures across the country to help defeat the far-right agenda and advance a progressive vision for the future. Our mission is to identify and elect more trailblazers – youthful, audacious, and charismatic leaders who aren’t afraid to challenge the status quo. We pledge to stand with them, equipping their campaigns with the tools to succeed: from fundraising and messaging to scheduling and budgeting. We’ll raise the banner of their cause, rallying funds online and in person.

OUR FOUNDERS

David Hogg is a leader in the fight to end gun violence and Co-Founder of March for Our Lives, an organization that has helped lead one of the largest youth movements in our country.

Kevin Lata was 2022's Campaign Manager of the year and Campaign Manager for Maxwell Frost, the first Gen-Z member of Congress. He understands the unique challenges young candidates face and how to navigate them and win tough races.

BUILD THE EMILYS LIST FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Leaders We Deserve invests in candidates who reflect our generation and its values matching them with the resources they need to run strong campaigns, win, and change the face of power. Think EMILYs List for young, progressive courageous candidates. Leaders We Deserve invests in young people, knocks down these barriers, and elects more young people to office. We're doing this by:

- Recruitment: Identifying candidates who will have the biggest impact on their states (that's real work).
- Providing Day-to-Day Support: We help campaigns build from the ground up and work with them directly on fundraising, messaging, coalition building, voter contact, and volunteer recruitment.
- Volunteer Network: Our grassroots volunteer army has person-to-person conversations with voters all across a candidates' district, advocating on their behalf.
- Running Paid Media Campaigns: We run a well-funded independent expenditure program.

ELECTING MORE YOUNG PEOPLE HELPS ADVANCE THE PROGRESSIVE AGENDA IN KEY WAYS

- Proximity to the Issues – As the mass shooting generation, we need people in office that understand the anxiety of not knowing if they'll survive math class.
- Representation: Giving young people a voice in politics that looks like them. Giving them more faith in democracy and government.
- Voter Turnout: It gives young people (and old people) hope encouraging them to show up and demand action. Think back to Rep Justin Jones after the Nashville shooting and thousands of young people showing up and many after who signed up to run for office.
- Builds a Bench: As of 2019, 45% of members of Congress started in state legislatures. Electing young people at the state level will build a pipeline of future leaders, which protects the progressive movement and builds a strong foundation.

Howdy, y'all! Join us - the Funky East Dallas Democrats, aka The FEDDs. Making FRIENDS, having FUN organizing TOGETHER, and TURNING TEXAS BLUE.

After the 2016 election, a group of highly motivated women began organizing as the East Dallas Chapter of Pantsuit Nation called, "Together We Will - East Dallas." Our mission, experience, and level of involvement in the "resistance" grew from protests, postcard writing, and phone calls, to voter registration, and the formation of The Funky East Dallas Democrats, also known as The FEDDs.

Since our formation, the FEDDs have utilized our PUMP strategy to build community, precinct by precinct. The "PUMP" or Precinct United Mobilization Plan is a magical combination of:

fun + relational organizing + deep canvassing = ❤️👉

We build teams of volunteer organizers, precinct by precinct. Newbies come for the fun, effective activities, and stay because they form real friendships. By focusing on community building, we've made the organization, and our important work, sustainable. And, we just keep growing! The FEDDs are currently a network of over 5k volunteers across North Texas!!

We share training, resources, and tools with volunteer organizers and Dem Precinct Chairs to increase voter turnout in each precinct and have been successful increasing voter turnout by 5-10% per precinct, each election cycle since our formation.

We're a flat, 100% volunteer member group. We don't have dues or bylaws, and we don't endorse candidates in primaries or municipals. We want everyone to feel welcome to organize with us and run for office.

Join us in making friends & having fun, while making a difference!

“Flippin’ Funky”

The FEDDs like to make everything FUN, while also GSD - “getting sh*t done!” To make Dems in our area more visible, we started the bumper magnet tradition of “flippin funky.” When you come across another car with the FEDDs car magnet, you flip it upside down, take a photo of it, and share it with the group on one of our social media channels or email. It’s silly fun, but has effectively shown how many more Dems there are here than we realize. We now see FEDDs bumper magnets all across Texas, and the nation!!

Mitchell is supported by Stonewall Democrats of Dallas which supports trans surgery for minors but she claims “bathroom bills” is not an issue Texans care about.

◆ Mitchell told the Dallas Morning News:

Texans are increasingly concerned about affordability, from housing to groceries. How can the Legislature effectively address this concern?

Allison Mitchell:

As previously stated, property tax relief without a meaningful return to taxpayers is not enough.

The Legislature must support our consumer economy by advancing policies that reduce transportation and supply-chain costs, eliminate hidden taxes and fees on groceries, increase housing supply, lower construction costs, invest in grid reliability to reduce utility bills, expand access to childcare and the workforce, and provide targeted tax relief that does not destabilize our schools or cities. These are the issues Texans care about—not book bans and bathroom bills.

In 2023, Mitchell went to a Design Industries Foundation Fighting AIDS (DIFFA) fundraiser and posted a video of half-naked male go-go dancers and another video of herself showing how she was amused by them. Under the guise of fighting AIDS, DIFFA promotes the radical politics of BLM and transgender ideology.

https://www.instagram.com/p/CsNXMhmOV9h/?img_index=2

◆ DIFFA stands for Design Industries Foundation Fighting AIDS.

WHO WE ARE

Since 1984, DIFFA has granted millions of dollars to North Texas HIV/AIDS Programs by raising funds through the production of incredible events highlighting the design community. DIFFA is one of the largest and most successful fundraising organizations for HIV/AIDS non-profit service providers and education programs within Texas, New York, California, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts and Washington. DIFFA is the only HIV/AIDS organization in Texas that provides non-earmarked funding exclusively to HIV/AIDS service efforts in our communities, thus providing for the direct care for persons living with HIV/AIDS. Dallas is DIFFA's largest chapter by funds raised. The unique design-focused events DIFFA Dallas holds include Burgers and Burgundy, DIFFA Wreath Collection, and House of DIFFA.

WHO WE SERVE

Our grants process makes it easier for donors to make the most impact for those living with HIV/AIDS. We do our homework so funds will go to the agencies and people with the greatest need. DIFFA has made significant financial contributions to AIDS Service Organizations in the state of Texas. Our grants process includes site visits, fiscal scrutiny, and personal interviews with potential grantees to ensure that funds are appropriated where they can do the most good. DIFFA also plays a major part in the HIV/AIDS awareness and prevention education throughout the state of Texas.

VIEW OUR GRANTS
PROCESS

WHY WE MATTER

Our grant philosophy is to close the gap left by insufficient and declining government funding. According to the latest reports (end of 2017) from the Dallas County Health and Human Service, in 2017 it was estimated 18,073 people were living with HIV in Dallas County. This is an increase in over 57% since 2006. In 2017 there were 814 New HIV diagnoses in Dallas County alone. In 2016 63% of new HIV diagnoses were in persons less than 35 years of age. As the number of new diagnoses stays relatively consistent per year, and infected people are living longer, the number of people living with HIV/AIDS continues to increase. The overall prevalence rate of person living with HIV/AIDS in Dallas county is 701 per 100,000. Funds from the Ryan White Comprehensive AIDS Resources Emergency (CARE) Act, the principal source of Federal funding for AIDS Service Organizations, have been reduced significantly.

DIFFA/Dallas has been fighting for decades against stigma associated with HIV and AIDS. Part of that activism is educating the public that this disease affects men, women, and children of all walks of life— not just gay men.

The LGBTQ+ community started Pride Month as an act of civil disobedience lead by black and brown trans women. People like Marsha P. Johnson looked injustice right in the eye during the Stonewall riots 51 years ago.

Today, we are all fighting again. This time, for action against systemic racism toward black cisgender and transgender men and women across the country.

To our LGBTQ+ family, we wish you a happy Pride Month. To our black brothers and sisters (straight and LGBTQ+ alike,) we will continue to stand alongside you. Because black lives have always mattered.

She was born in Galveston but has lived in Chicago, St. Louis, and recently Massachusetts.

- ◆ Mitchell told the Dallas Morning News “I am a lifelong Texas resident”

Why should voters choose you over your opponent(s)?

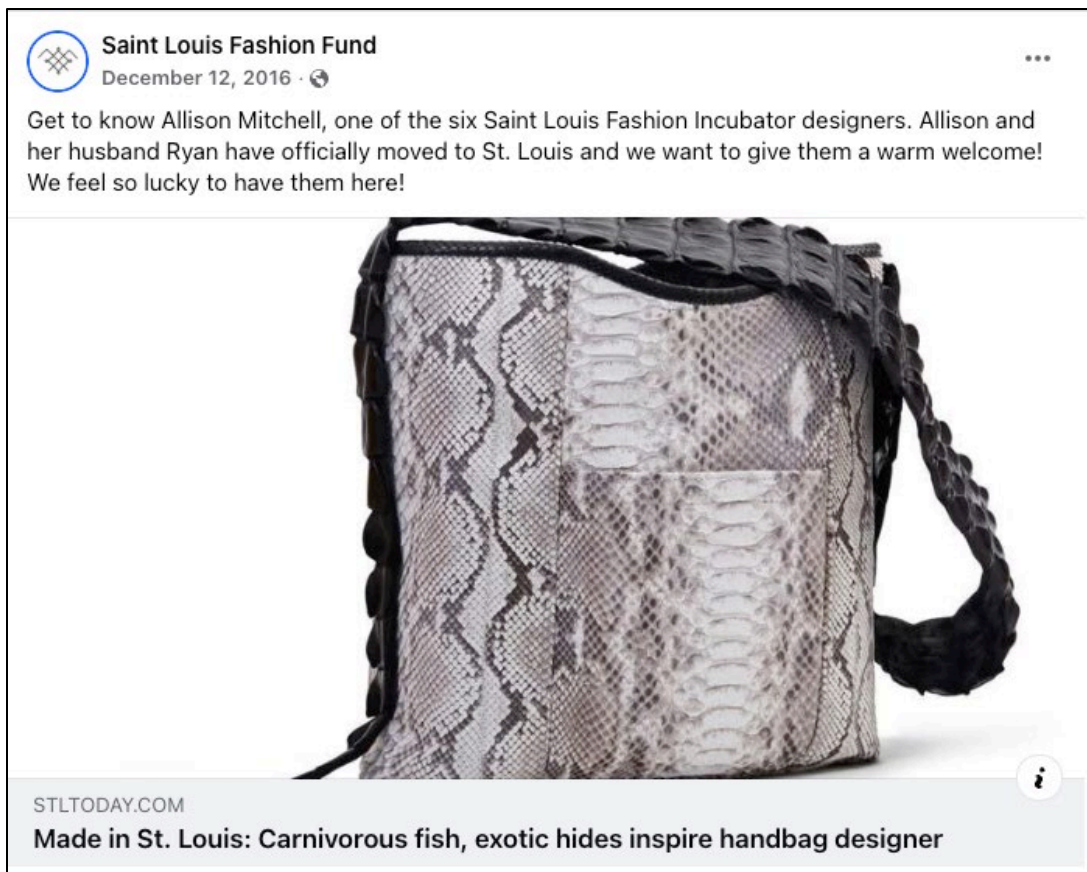

Allison Mitchell:

What truly sets us apart are the very reasons I am running for this seat. I am proud to say I am not a career politician. I am a lifelong Texas resident who was raised in this district, a taxpayer in House District 108, and a business professional. I am also a parent raising my children here—and a practical, rational person who believes in fairness and accountability.

I cried for Charlie Kirk's children today. But for a sitting President to blame "the left" and encourage retribution is not leadership. MAGA, you are being controlled by a false god. He is using you, do you see it yet?

Allison has an uncanny ability to make you feel like you're the only person in the room when you're talking with her. She takes sincere interest in the concerns of her clients, which clearly shows in her bend-over-backwards attitude to execute the best marketing strategies possible. She's smart and funny and an absolute delight to have as part of your team. She is my go-to choice and recommendation for all things brand management and strategic marketing.

I have had the pleasure of working with Allison over the last several months, both as a co-service provider and as a client--her company, brandnew Marketing, is helping us with branding and a much needed website update. I have found Allison to be intuitive and creative regarding a broad range of disciplines with spot-on approaches to public perception. She also has a knack of managing a project smoothly even in the face of strong personalities. I would highly recommend Allison to anyone needing help with their public presence

I hired Jay to put together an infographic for my agency. He spent a lot of time engaging with me to ensure his understanding of what I wanted was spot-on. The challenge of fitting all our content into a seamless infographic is not an easy one, and Jay took it on with expert capability and professionalism. I highly recommend working with Jay, he is a true artist who enjoys his craft.

Allison on the Issues

A fresh, new voice for our community, Allison is running to bring bold, honest leadership to the legislature. She's committed to standing up for working families, fully funding public schools, and delivering real results for House District 108.

Allison believes every Texan deserves to live with dignity, safety, and equal opportunity. She supports defending personal freedoms and ensuring that all people are treated with respect under the law. She's focused on solving real problems and standing up for what matters: strong public schools, affordable healthcare, safe communities, and economic opportunity for all.

Economic Growth

Strong Economy

Texans need meaningful property tax relief – especially for middle class homeowners. By closing appraisal loopholes, maintaining property tax equity, and targeting relief to homeowners instead of corporate entities, we protect the tax base for our public schools without punishing the homeowner.

Strengthening our middle class requires a multi-pronged strategy that addresses income inequality, economic mobility, and institutional reform. Allison knows the power of a strong consumer market, and she will fight for the prosperity and economic opportunity of every Texan.

Fully Funding Public Schools

Stronger, Fully Funded Public Schools

Texas ranks 44th in the nation for school spending—even with a record budget surplus. Instead of investing in our kids, state leaders are pushing a billion-dollar voucher scheme that benefits a few while leaving behind disabled, neurodivergent, and low-income children.

As a proud public-school parent, I know the value of strong schools and quality teachers. I've also seen firsthand the harm caused when districts face budget cuts. In Austin, I will fight for public schools—not private interests operating at the expense of our children.

My priorities for public education are clear:

Funding

- Raise school funding to keep pace with inflation.
- Deliver across-the-board raises for teachers and support staff.
- Strengthen pensions and ensure retirees receive cost-of-living adjustments tied to inflation.
- Increase state contributions to health insurance for active and retired school employees, with funding mechanisms that adjust as costs rise.

Accountability

- Hold private schools, charters, and vendors that receive taxpayer dollars to the same transparency, accountability, and labor standards as public schools.
- Replace the harmful A–F ratings system with holistic measures like educator quality, class size, and student and family engagement.

Testing

- Cut back standardized testing and test prep.
- End the practice of tying teacher pay to student test scores.

Community Schools

- Expand community schools that bring together parents, teachers, students, and local partners to design unique plans that turn neighborhood schools into hubs for education, health, and social services.

Special Education

- Protect minority students and students with disabilities from disproportionate discipline.
- Expand and improve special education services, ensuring students and families receive the support they deserve.
- Make Texas a national leader in special education, starting with the strong programs already thriving in HD 108.

Pre-K

- Fully fund pre-K as we do all other grades.
- Guarantee free, full-day pre-K for all children of school support staff.

Expanding Healthcare Access

Access

Texas has the highest rate of uninsured people in the country and faces a record number of rural hospital closures. The state's maternal mortality rate rose by 56% from the year 2019 to 2022. Affordable access to healthcare is not just a human right – it's also smart policy. We can build on the progress of the Affordable Care Act by expanding Medicaid, lowering prescription drug costs, and offering a public option. No one should have to choose between seeing a doctor and putting food on the table.

Medicaid Expansion

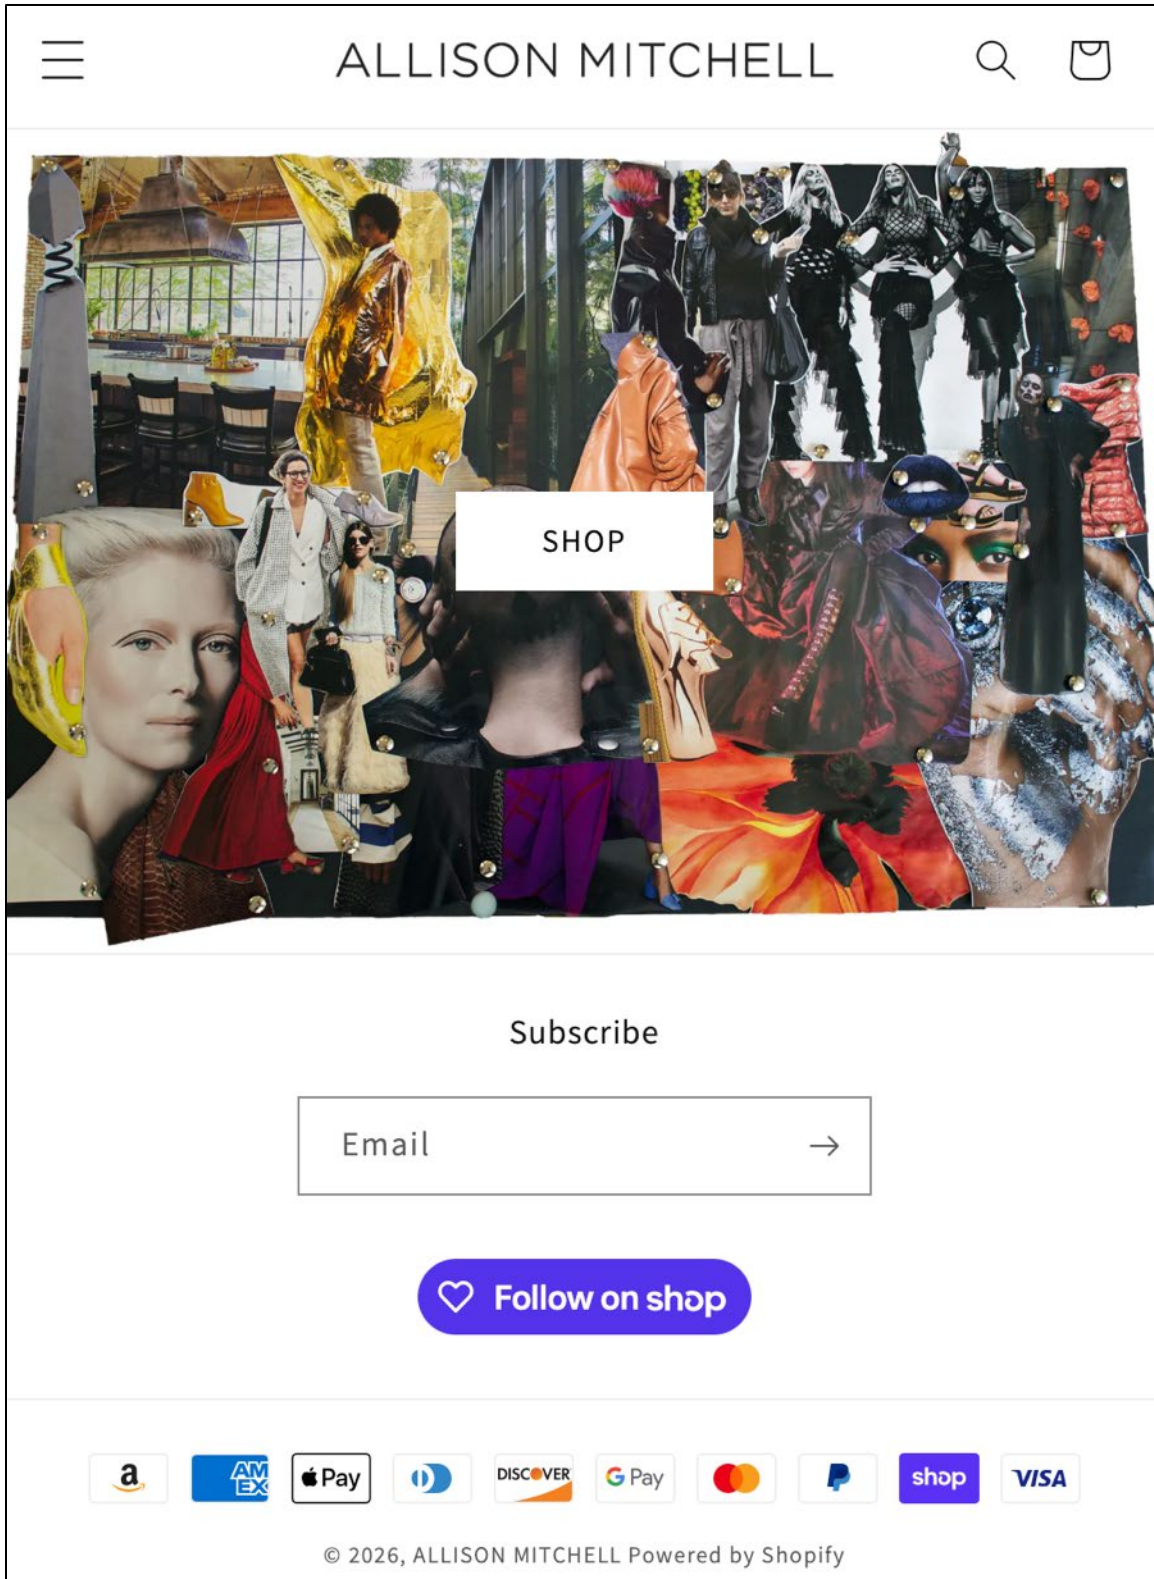

Access to healthcare is a basic right, and one that is fiscally responsible. Texas must expand Medicaid, which brings billions of federal dollars into the Texas economy and provides our most vulnerable community members with basic healthcare.

Healthcare Workers

Dedicating your career to healthcare is a calling, not a conspiracy. Our healthcare workers are increasingly facing burnout, physical harm, and threats. For Allison, this is personal. Her family's medical background taught her the value of our doctors, nurses, community health workers, and clinics. Public health funding, research, and additional support of our mental health clinicians, as well as expansion of services in rural and impoverished communities, fosters a healthier and more prosperous Texas.

DESIGNER Q&A WITH ALLISON

What inspired you to start your line of handbags?

It happened by accident. I never pursued fashion or design as a career because growing up, the message I got was that it wasn't a serious ambition. So I had a digital marketing agency for four years in Dallas. At that time I was going to a lot of networking events to get new clients and I wanted a long, oversized clutch that was cute and chic. So I made one out of ostrich-embossed vinyl from JoAnn Fabric and lined it in hot pink tweed. Everywhere I went, people were asking me about it. I would take it to stores with me and buyers would ask about it, then a store in Dallas said, "I'll take ten of them right now." Everything just kept falling in my lap and I decided this really was something that could have some legs to it.

What is your creative process like?

I'm really organic about how I work. Today, for example, is not a day for design because I'm a little tired and I have other stuff on my mind that I have to do. I have a photo shoot. So it's really just about, did I wake up that morning and feel ready to go in and execute some ideas? I'm super visual and sometimes ideas for bags will just pop into my head like lightning and I'll have to go make them out of Scuple. But that didn't happen today.

How has your marketing background helped you grow your business?

I've always worked in marketing, mostly copywriting, but I've always been good at branding and messaging — and that's key not just for a designer or startup, but any big corporation. If you want people to buy your product, your messaging has to be clear, concise, and reveal the value of what your product is. Because I knew all that, it was easy for me to put together something that really zeroed in on what we were selling and what differentiated us.

WHAT IS YOUR GO-TO TOOL FOR DESIGNING?
SCULPEY.

WHO DO YOU HOPE TO SEE CARRYING ONE OF YOUR BAGS?
OLIVIA PALERMO.

HOW WOULD YOU DESCRIBE YOUR LINE IN ONE WORD?
ORGANIC. MINIMALIST.

INSTAGRAM USER WHO INSPIRES YOU?
@DELPOZO

YOUR BREAKTHROUGH BAG?
THE MARIGOLD CALF HAIR CLUTCH.

A TREND YOU'RE NOT INTO?
ATHLEISURE.

FIRST PIECE OF CLOTHING YOU LOVED?
MY MOM'S DONNA KARAN MARIGOLD SATIN FLOOR-LENGTH SKIRT FROM THE 90S.

What are some of the challenges you encountered in launching your line?

I think the biggest challenge has been learning how to buy and use material in a cost-effective way. I've found that it's really easy to overbuy material and then not be able to make the money back in selling the actual product. That's been something I've had to learn how to do. I'm getting better and better at managing my inventory of both bags and materials. You have to think of your materials as your inventory - as money that is just sitting there. That's been a really big challenge, but I'm getting there.

Who are your style icons?

I feel like this is a really "this-generation" answer, but I'm a huge fan of Leandra Medine from Man Repeller. I love the creative, bizarre look that she does with her outfits. I love that aesthetic. Jane Aldrige from Sea of Shoes has some of the best taste of all the influencers that are out there right now. I just think these young, differentiated bloggers have such incredible style.

What advice do you have for a designer who's just starting out?

My advice is that perseverance wins out a lot of times over talent. You can be really talented, but if you don't keep pushing and driving the wagon, it just won't go anywhere. Also, fail fast and learn quickly. That's a big strength of mine and I think the ability to take feedback and learn from it is a really good skill to have.

Todd Lilly is the Director of Strategy + Production at Brand New Marketing, LLC.

Over the last 15+ years, Todd has worked with some of the largest and most well-respected digital agencies in the country. He has lead the digital charge on brands such as AA.com, Pepsi, FritoLay, Disney, Universal Studios, Omni Hotels, Hampton Inn Hotels, AT&T, GameStop, and State Farm (among others).

A gifted and eager strategist, Todd's biggest problem is putting the brakes on his ideas long after a brainstorming session ends. We like to refer to "Toddy" as our "quintessential dabbler." He's scrappy, resourceful, energetic and enthusiastic. He rarely takes no for an answer.

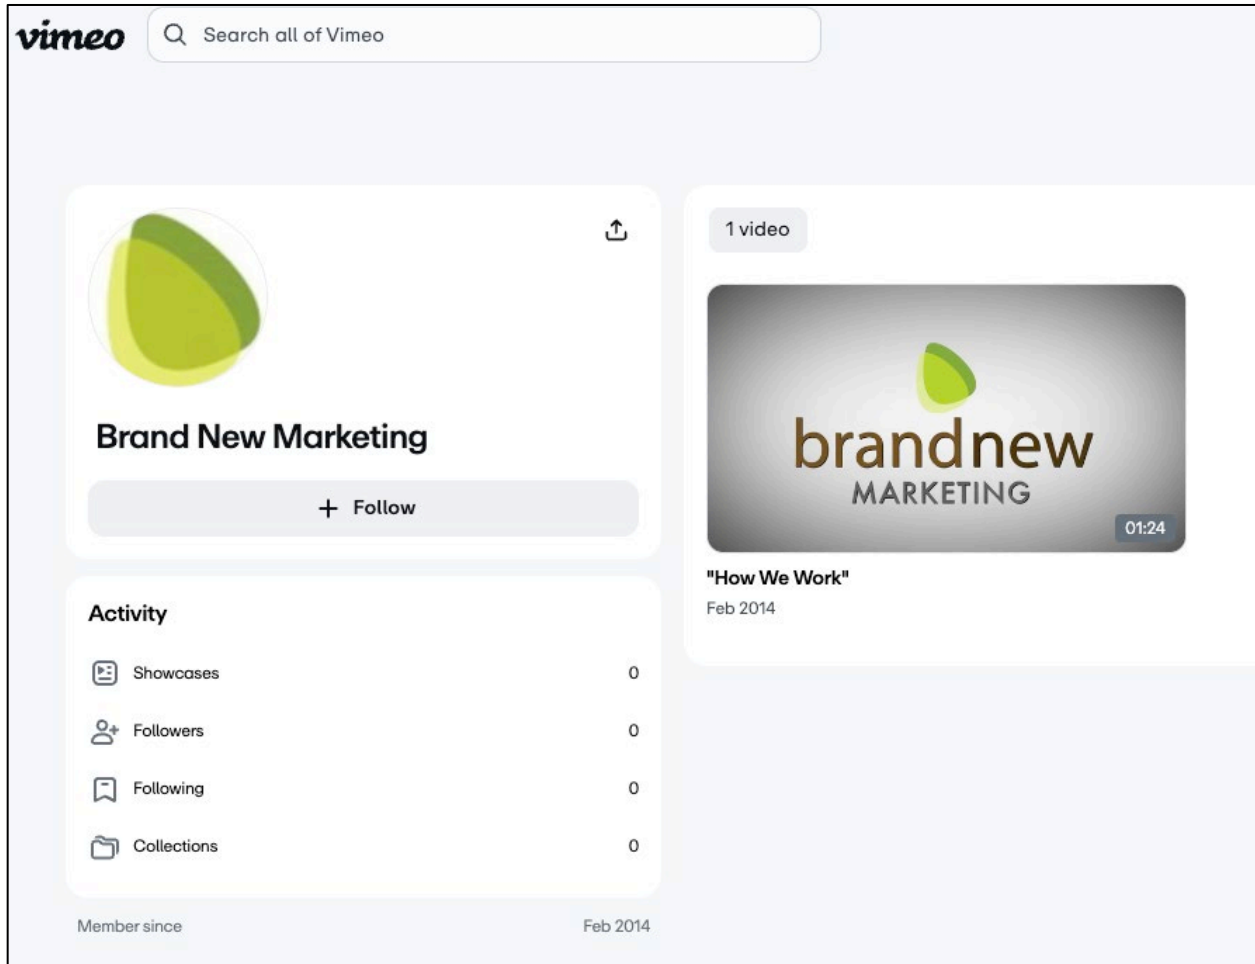

"No one approaches creative problem solving like Todd. He's quick on his toes, strategic in his thinking, and can give any idea a great handle in a moment's notice."

Todd's high design sensitivities make him a born marketer. In his free-time, Todd can be caught scheming up ways to leverage the latest technology to make truly memorable experiences for clients and their customers. He also loves nothing more than to spend time with his two sons, Ethan and Noah.

In this five-part series, I hope to clear up some of the fog when it comes to finding the right agency for your business. Follow us and check back each day to get the rest of our tips on this topic!

1. Core competency

“Define marketing.” I was actually asked that question by an interviewer for a job I did not get many years ago. My thoughts were yanked back to that ridiculous scene in Reality Bites when that C-Level, bitter, corporate woman asks Winona Ryder to “define irony.”

It’s true, the function of marketing is to provide qualified leads and optimize the sales process to turn those leads into customers, who then become advocates of the brand. This is what marketing does, but what it is, is so much more. It is so much, in fact, that I opt to save it for another post. This is why, when shopping for your marketing agency, finding one with a core competency is critical.

Many, many marketing and advertising firms and agencies do great work (and many, many do bad), but to become a client at an agency that “does it all for anyone and everyone” is chaotic and unfocused.

Ask yourself:

What would their role be in my business?

Develop my marketing plan. Bring my product to market. Brand my company. Whatever the answer, it should be short, sweet, and clear.

Am I ready to commit to working with an agency?

This is about money. Are you willing to carve out a budget and put it towards marketing?

Ask them:

What does your agency do best?

If their answer is, “Everything,” walk away.

How long have you been in business?

Young is not bad; in fact, it can actually be better in many cases, but an agency that skirts the issue is unprepared for you as a client.

In an effort to avoid information overload, I’d like to end it here and give you some time to mull all this over before we move on to tip #2.

Check out the rest of the series:

Tip #2: Where do you fall in their range of clientele?

MEET ALLISON MITCHELL, CREATOR OF LUXURY CLUTCHES, PURSES AND MORE

Meet Allison Mitchell, Creator of Luxury Clutches, Purses and More

Julia Cain Mar 30, 2017 Updated Jul 20, 2022

When the Saint Louis Fashion Incubator (SLFI) announced its inaugural class of designers, the list of talents included both locals and artists from across the country. The chosen six included accessory designer Allison Mitchell, the creator of a line of luxury clutches, purses and small accessories made from opulent hides. Ladue News recently caught up with the designer to learn more about her work, her St. Louis space and her experience with the SLFI.

How did you begin working with accessories?

I fell into this career path by accident. I wanted an oversized clutch, and I couldn't find anything that fit my vision, so I made one. Everyone who saw it wanted one, and when the demand for it went beyond family and friends to a buyer from a boutique in Dallas, I decided to launch a small collection of oversized calf-hair clutches to see if they created any traction.

Needless to say, the reaction from the Dallas market was beyond anything I could have imagined, and we sold out a couple of times over the first few months in business. I actually resisted fully delving into the demands of being an independent designer for a while, mostly because I already had a business – a digital marketing agency that I founded in Dallas – but also because I didn't consider myself a fashion designer. ... I went for it, and thank goodness. I found that I had a natural knack for designing handbags that people loved and had never seen before.

You work with such unique and unusual skins. What draws you to these hides instead of standard leather?

I have to see the materials in order to design a bag – the materials have always told me what to do, not the other way around. It's the unusual materials that speak to me, so that's probably why I use them. A side of nappa lambskin is beautiful in its own right, but when I look at it, I don't see the end result. That vision has to be there for me. ... I see the entire bag in its finished state when I look at a skin or hide that inspires me, then I make a mini clay model of the bag with as much detail as possible so my manufacturer and I are completely on the same page. My office is full of tiny bag sculptures!

The linings of the bag are also unusual, yet clearly intentional. How are those selected?

It's all part of that vision I get when I look at a material that speaks to me. I just sort of know what the lining needs to be, and I go find it. I love thoughtful design and subtlety, and the surprise linings are like a little secret for the wearer.

Could you tell me a bit about your studio?

I design wherever I am and wherever my modeling clay is. My studio is located in the Saint Louis Fashion Incubator on Washington Avenue, and it doubles as my working headquarters as well as my creative space. I've set it up to look like more of a showroom for my pieces and collections, with blown-up photos from my first lookbook on my wall and a little sitting area with a cowhide rug.

Who are you imagining when you create your designs?

I have to admit, I only design things that I would love to have in my own closet. I ask myself, "If you could have any bag to go with this outfit, what would it be?" And then I make it. I love that!

Where are your items available?

We sell to many small boutiques around the country, including a store in Toronto and one in Tokyo. But all styles are always available on our website, and sometimes we even have secret sample sales online.

How did you get involved with the SLFI, and what has the experience been like so far?

They came to Dallas to recruit local designers. I was so blown away, and the opportunity came at such a perfect time. I knew I couldn't pass it up. The experience here has been totally life-changing. The amount of support, opportunity and direct connections with high-up industry professionals in New York are such a leg up for an emerging designer.

HAUTE SECRETS WITH AVANT-GARDE DESIGNER, ALLISON MITCHELL

HAUTE SECRETS, NEWS | July 28, 2016

Haute Secrets with Avant-Garde Designer, Allison Mitchell

Designer, Allison Mitchell

Allison Mitchell's fearless spirit is the DNA of her bold, avant-garde inspired designs. Launching in 2014, her handbag and accessory brand is now sold in luxury boutiques throughout the country including Stanley Korshak in Dallas and Elements in New York City.

Beginning her career in the competitive world of marketing, her agency became a resourceful leader in PR and branding. Not prepared for its rapid growth, the company's success became its unfortunate demise when it was not able to secure additional capital to aid with expansion.

With a strong sense of creativity and passion for the arts, the stunning beauty embarked on a new journey, after she created her first handbag. Turning heads everywhere she went confirmed that she was on the right path with her newly designed accessory. Soon Dallas was taken by storm with Allison's luxurious and chic handbags that serendipitously began as a do-it-yourself project.

Today Allison Mitchell handbags and accessories can be found spanning the globe in countries such as France, Spain, Japan and Egypt.

How did your career begin? It was a complete accident. I was bored on a Sunday afternoon and made an oversized clutch for myself out of vinyl from JoAnn Fabrics. It looked great, so I carried it to networking events and luncheons. Everyone, including buyers from some Dallas boutiques, asked me to make them one, so I decided to launch a small collection of oversized calf hair clutches, the same size as the original bag I made. Once they launched, we couldn't keep them on the shelves. Things took off like a rocket ship!

From where do you draw inspiration from for your designs? The materials tell me what to do. I'm not an artist who thinks of things in her head and then wills them into reality – I need to see my medium, and then I know what to do.

Who is your mentor in design? I have mentors in business, but not in design. The designers who inspire me are people like Yeohlee Teng, Consuelo Castiglioni, Yohji Yamamoto, Junya Watanabe, Rick Owens, Rosie Assoulin, Amy Smilovic, Pheobe Philo, anyone who is creating wear-able art.

If you were to do a collection in collaboration with another designer, who would it be? Rosie Assoulin. She has such a great eye for playful luxury, and that is an element of my aesthetic. She has the talent of taking a piece to the brink of costume, and then perfectly halting it at luxury/couture with functionality and exquisite quality.

How do you think your brand has evolved since its inception and what key element has remained consistent? What a great question! The brand itself has always been very solid, which I think is part of the reason we enjoyed success so early. I purposefully designed the brand to carry the message of chic, minimalist, luxury, quality accessories, that at the same time were raw and unapologetic. We've only been around for 2 years, so we are still going strong with that message and our customer. If anything, a piece that has become part of the brand is now thoughtful design – the detail and practicality of every piece is evident and puts the bags on the arms of women who don't necessarily know or care about fashion.

How does your brand differ from other couture designers? Aside from the lower price range of a collection made from exotic skins and hides ($900 – $3000 – most luxury exotics begin at $6k), the designs of the bags are dictated by the look and feel of the material used. The bags sort of hold on to what makes the animal special, creating an aesthetic I like to call organic minimalism. There’s really nothing like it out there, and I hear that from my customers all the time. It’s my favorite compliment!

Describe your latest collection? What was the inspiration behind the collection? The Fall/Winter 2016 collection is about to be available in stores and online in August. It’s a much more sophisticated, every day collection, and the whole thing was inspired by a fabulous crocodile backstrap piece I found while sourcing in NYC. The collection itself is full of gorgeous totes and mini totes, featuring the crocodile as the shoulder strap, but uncut and un-manipulated in any way. There is a larger range of sizes in the clutches, and some new materials and shapes.

Where do you see your brand in the next decade? We are working towards global flagship stores. I would like to have ten in fashion capitals around the world. I don’t really see the brand getting into clothing or footwear, I see us staying true to luxury accessories.

Define fashion? Fashion is the conversation you have with the world around you.

What has influenced your designs the most? Probably my mother’s style. We have similar taste, but she really taught me about playful elegance. She has wonderful style and is fearless with statement pieces.

What advice would you give aspiring fashion designers? Perseverance always wins out over talent. Being told “no” by buyers, press, customers, investors, or other designers is part of the path and it’s okay to feel sad, but it is not okay to let it stop you in your tracks. No one who became a success had an easy time of it.

What is your favorite material to work with? Anything people have never heard of!

Least favorite? Glue – There are some special glues specifically for leather, but I try to manufacture my bags without using a drop!

Go to outfit for a night on the town? I wish I had a go-to outfit for anything, it would make my life a lot easier. These days, anything off-the-shoulder makes me feel a little swankier and ready for a night out.

Favorite accessory? My marigold signature calf hair clutch.

Tell us about your philanthropic work in the community? I work with the CDC (Citizens Development Center) as a volunteer. When I have time, I teach their clients about nutrition and self-awareness. The CDC is a place for adults with cognitive and intellectual disabilities that provides many of them with the chance to work on the assembly lines for the surrounding industrial businesses. For the clients who are not able to work, they can spend their days socializing and going to classes or activities, like my classes.

What are signature characteristics of your design that make it recognizable to clients? The oversized aesthetic and the use of hides and skins without hardware seem to be the first things clients talk about.

Any new projects coming up in the near future? I'm participating in Fashion X Dallas and Fashion X Houston in the fall. FXD is Sept 8 – 10, and FXH is Oct 13 – 15. We are also doing an Instagram show for our fashion week presentation on September 8th, in lieu of a live show.

– What political leader do you most admire and why?

Allison Mitchell:

The late Congresswoman Barbara Jordan, who, in my opinion, is the type of politician that every public servant should strive to emulate. Her achievements ranged from supporting legislation expanding civil liberties and equal protections, providing legal immigration pathways, advocating for the Voting Rights Act, serving on the House Judiciary Committee, and changing the tone, credibility, and moral center of American politics. Her regulated, principled approach to the democratic process earned her respect across party lines and resulted in efficient governance and leadership. When I stand up to speak, I always think of Rep. Jordan’s presence, her booming voice, and unwavering sense of self. At their foundation, her achievements strengthened democracy itself.

– If elected, what will be your top three priorities?

Allison Mitchell:

Education: We need fully funded public schools that prepare every child for life and leadership in a rapidly changing world. We must recommit to our curriculum goals, adopt newer, proven instructional modalities from top-ranking public education systems, remove unconstitutional religious-based mandates, and end the voucher program before it defunds and destabilizes our public education infrastructure. We must move our state’s education ranking from the bottom half to the top three by offering smaller class sizes, competitive teacher pay, and strong investments in early childhood and career-ready programs. In short, we must invest in our children.

Healthcare: Affordable, accessible healthcare and lower prescription drug costs should be a basic right, not a luxury. I proudly join the fight to release the chokehold pharmaceutical corporations have on lifesaving care. I also believe we must end government overreach within the healthcare system—from repealing legislation that interferes with patient autonomy and a provider’s ability to administer treatment to expanding Medicaid. Our state legislature is notorious for creating obstacles for providers, hospital systems, and patients alike. If we want to retain talent, attract business, and foster growth, we must amplify healthcare voices and provide the workforce with the flexibility and resources needed to keep Texas a leader in health and science.

Affordability: In my conversations with voters across our district, affordability and cost of living consistently rise to the top as families’ primary concerns. From housing and childcare to groceries and transportation, we need smart economic policies that boost wages, limit wasteful government spending, deliver real returns to taxpayers, invest in infrastructure, and strengthen the middle class.

– What are the most significant long-term challenges facing your district and how will you address them?

Allison Mitchell:

I was raised in this district and continue to live here, and I can say—across the political spectrum—that many of our concerns are shared. Though they may be framed differently, the core issues facing our district come down to public safety, education, and cost of living.

Public Safety and Crime: I support law enforcement and know our local police officers work tirelessly to address the many challenges that come with living in a large city. We need officers who are properly trained to meet these challenges and must continue investing in crime prevention. At the same time, we should expand mental health services, pursue smarter housing solutions, and strengthen community policing—efforts that support both public safety and our police departments.

Education: Our children will always be my top priority. Fully funded schools, competitive teacher pay, early childhood education, and adequate classroom resources lead to opportunity and growth for the entire community. I believe there is no one-size-fits-all solution for our schools, and I plan to address needs such as career-readiness programs and class sizes on a case-by-case basis to limit overspending and ensure efficient use of resources.

Affordability: Affordability remains top of mind for Texans—not just residents of House District 108. We must prioritize economic policies that support consumers, deliver real property tax relief back to taxpayers, and expand access to affordable healthcare, housing, and childcare, all while maintaining fiscal responsibility and limiting government spending.

– Texas has a powerful economy. What steps do you advocate to increase the state’s economic power?

Allison Mitchell:

Texas has the second-largest GDP in the nation, driven in large part by our powerful oil and gas industry. While energy fuels exports and investment, it is our strong consumer economy that ultimately funds the state. Economic health, however, cannot be measured by GDP growth alone—Texas reported growth three percentage points above the national average last quarter—but must also be evaluated through indicators such as the wealth gap, poverty rates, uninsured rates, employment levels, and education rankings to provide a data-driven snapshot of our economic health and trajectory.

Texas has one of the fastest-growing wealth gaps in the country, some of the highest poverty rates, and ranks in the bottom half nationally for education, with inconsistent access to funding and quality across the state. These trends point to a weakening consumer economy and a destabilized middle class. Our pro-business stance too often benefits corporations over consumers in the name of job creation and stability. Without meaningful support for consumers—through wage growth, reduced cost of living, housing affordability, and responsible interest rates that protect against inflation—our economic future is not sustainable.

An increase in the minimum wage, coupled with targeted small-business tax breaks to offset pressure on the service industry, is a modest step that could yield significant gains in the health of our consumer economy. Beyond that, a meaningful reduction in property taxes, along with increased investment in the Texas Permanent School Fund to raise per-student spending, should be top priorities to ensure long-term economic strength and sustainability.

– Education (include all degrees):

Allison Mitchell:

Certificate of Completion: SMU Cox School of Business (2013)

AA: Culinary Arts, Le Cordon Bleu (2012)

BA: Philosophy, Lake Forest College (2008)

Graduate: The Hockaday School of Dallas (2004)

– Previous public offices sought or held:

Allison Mitchell:

N/A

– Texans are increasingly concerned about affordability, from housing to groceries. How can the Legislature effectively address this concern?

Allison Mitchell:

As previously stated, property tax relief without a meaningful return to taxpayers is not enough. The Legislature must support our consumer economy by advancing policies that reduce transportation and supply-chain costs, eliminate hidden taxes and fees on groceries, increase housing supply, lower construction costs, invest in grid reliability to reduce utility bills, expand access to childcare and the workforce, and provide targeted tax relief that does not destabilize our schools or cities. These are the issues Texans care about –not book bans and bathroom bills.

– Have you ever been arrested or been a defendant in any criminal proceedings? If so, please explain.

Allison Mitchell:

No

– What criteria should lawmakers use to assess if the newly created private school education savings account program is improving students' educational outcomes?

Allison Mitchell:

The criteria should be multipronged and comprehensive including:

Student Academic Outcomes

The core measure: Voucher students vs. demographically similar students who remained in public school

Standardized test scores in reading, math, and science

Student growth percentiles in progress, not just raw scores

Graduation rates

College enrollment

Equity and Access

Who benefits and who doesn't?

Participation by income level

Participation by disability status

Racial and geographic distribution

Access in rural vs. urban areas

Impact on Public Schools

Vouchers do not operate in a vacuum, we must track their effects

Changes in public-school funding per pupil

Class sizes

Program cuts or expansions

Student outcomes for non-voucher students

Accountability and Transparency

Oversight as with any publicly funded program

Academic reporting requirements for voucher schools

Financial transparency and audits

Student protection standards

Clear consequences for under-performing schools

Parental Choice and Satisfaction

- In the last session, the Legislature passed SB 840 to make it easier to build housing on underutilized commercial land. What do you think of the bill? What else could lawmakers do to encourage housing for moderate- and middle-income Texans?

Allison Mitchell:

I was pleased to see a bill pass through the Legislature aimed at lowering housing costs and expanding housing supply—an urgent need for many Texans. While concerns about limited local control, uneven impacts across cities, and potential strain on infrastructure are valid, I believe the bill’s benefits outweigh its potential drawbacks. We have seen many examples in which increased multifamily construction has put downward pressure on rents and improved housing availability. Ultimately, this bill represents a meaningful first step in addressing our state’s affordable housing crisis. As with any policy, we will need to course-correct along the way.

To further support households that earn too much to qualify for subsidies but too little to afford market-rate housing, we should pursue additional measures such as expanding workforce housing incentives, encouraging office-to-residential conversions, improving access to construction financing, and reducing insurance costs.

- Other than divorce, have you ever been involved in any civil lawsuits or have you ever declared personal or professional bankruptcy? If so, please explain.

Allison Mitchell:

N/A

- How do you think the president’s executive order to reclassify marijuana as a Schedule III drug will affect THC regulation in Texas?

Allison Mitchell:

Rescheduling of a drug does not override state law, and though a Schedule III drug is less restrictive than a Schedule I, Texas law still controls local regulation. Texas has a very limited medical cannabis program, and marijuana possession and use remain illegal for non-medical purposes under state law. In the short term, quite simply, federal rescheduling will not change the legality of THC in Texas. However, political pressure combined with industry and financial shifts could influence policy towards embracing the THC industry as another source of tax revenue.

– Why should voters choose you over your opponent(s)?

Allison Mitchell:

What truly sets us apart are the very reasons I am running for this seat. I am proud to say I am not a career politician. I am a lifelong Texas resident who was raised in this district, a taxpayer in House District 108, and a business professional. I am also a parent raising my children here—and a practical, rational person who believes in fairness and accountability.

House District 108 is home to some of the best public schools in the state, a thriving arts community, and a respected business community. I bring years of practical problem-solving experience and the ability and willingness to work across party lines, while prioritizing issues that matter most to our community: education, infrastructure, healthcare access, and cost-of-living relief. This approach stands in sharp contrast to my opponent's partisan priorities, which are dictated by Governor Greg Abbott, his donors, and GOP leadership—not by the best interests of this district.

My opponent's notable absence from the district—no town halls, no community meetings—demonstrates a clear disregard for the responsibilities of the office and fails to meet even the most basic expectations voters should have of their elected leadership. A senior member of the State Legislature should want to engage with constituents, be accessible, and be accountable—especially when supporting legislation that directly harms the schools and taxpayers of House District 108.

It is time for new leadership that brings balance, accountability, and a focus on real results—not ideology. In the ten years my opponent has held this seat, he has repeatedly claimed to support public schools, yet voted to defund them through vouchers, and claimed to fight for lower property taxes, yet delivered little meaningful relief.

The residents of House District 108 deserve leadership that is present, accountable, and fair. I am asking voters to support a new leader—one who will fight for them and for what is right, not for one party or for political or personal gain.

– Should Texas engage in mid-decennial redistricting?

Allison Mitchell:

No, and certainly not at the behest of a president.

– How should Texas improve school funding? Did HB3 go far enough? What does the next chapter of Texas education look like?

Allison Mitchell:

It's important to remember that "improved funding" is not the same as long-term investment. HB 3 was a landmark investment in public education, increasing state funding, boosting teacher pay, supporting early childhood education, and reducing local tax burdens. However, inflation and rising costs have outpaced funding growth, unequal impacts across districts persist, structural issues and special education funding gaps remain, and certain formula elements and reporting requirements continue to limit equity. It is time to revisit our long-term investment strategy for Texas education.

The next chapter of Texas education will be largely shaped by voucher legislation. If we want a preview of our children's educational future, we need only look to states that participate in Education Savings Account (ESA) programs. Data from states such as Arizona, Florida, and Oklahoma show significant funding shifts away from public schools, resulting in fewer dollars per pupil, rapidly growing state costs, reduced public school capacity, limited accountability and transparency, and mixed—or negative—academic outcomes.

– Should Texas expand Medicaid eligibility? Why or why not?

Allison Mitchell:

Yes, Texas should absolutely expand Medicaid eligibility. The federal government reimburses 90 percent of expansion costs, which would bring tens of billions of federal dollars into Texas over the next decade. Many Texans don't realize that we already pay these taxes; instead of being reimbursed, our money currently subsidizes other states. Expanding Medicaid is simply fiscal responsibility—and it is a policy widely supported by both our medical community and business community in HD108.

Expansion also reduces uncompensated care, leading to fewer rural hospital closures, fewer unpaid medical bills, and greater stability for working families. Job creation, economic growth, and net positive to neutral impacts on the state budget are additional reasons Texas should expand the program.

– Would you consider expanding gambling to increase state revenue?

Allison Mitchell:

Yes, though I would advocate for a statewide referendum on the legislation.

Legalized gambling would not only generate much-needed revenue as the Legislature pursues lower property taxes and reduces school funding, but it would also keep Texas dollars in Texas. Additional economic development benefits include construction, hospitality, tourism, convention growth, urban revitalization, and enhanced national and international positioning.
