RESEARCH FINDINGS _____ 12

Richardson board member of the Texas State Teachers Association-Retired, the affiliate of the National Education Association. The TSTA advocates for “racial justice” in the classroom as well as protections for illegal immigrants. Public school teachers are not required to join these unions in Texas, and Richardson’s association and work with them is deliberate and voluntary. _____ 13

Richardson is endorsed by Texas AFL-CIO and Texas AFT. _____ 19

Richardson reported nearly $35,000 in PAC and Party support in 2024. Her 2026 has not reported any as of her July 2026 semiannual report. _____ 21

The Rock Rose Foundation, of which Richardson is a “community advisory member” of their executive team, is a leftwing organization that gives out grants to “organizations working towards just and equitable community development.” In its full embrace of DEI, the organization brags that most of its grants go to “BIPOC” individuals. _____ 22

Richardson: “We pay our taxes too, and we deserve the same treatment as any other person.” Since 2015, Richardson and her husband have paid penalties and fees each year on their property taxes, totaling over $1,200. _____ 27

Richardson owns an apartment building in Queens. Records show Richardson has repeatedly paid her property taxes late, resulting in interest payments, and appears to have an open balance of over $3,600 from 2025 and nearly $5,000 from tax year 2026 (for which the last installment was due April 2026). _____ 31

Richardson takes credit for fighting for reimbursement from the state for veteran tax exemptions. The irony is that she posts a story about the Republican incumbent doing just that. _____ 37

Richardson opposes efforts to rein in voter fraud and limit mail-in voting. _____ 39

Richardson said that for the 2025 constitutional amendment election, she shared Solange Hommel’s recommendations for how to vote. Hommel encouraged people to vote No on prop 16 to ensure only citizens can vote. _____ 41

Richardson: “You know, oh, we got illegals voting, they had to have a state ID to go vote, guys. So, I think a lot of it that's out there is just fear and nonsense” _____ 48

Richardson complains about data centers but constantly shares and promotes clearly AI content. _____ 50

According to Richardson, the 2025 government shutdown is all the Republicans’ fault since they are the party who is in power, even though it was the Democrats refusing to compromise. _____ 53

Richardson is upset that a bill was passed allowing religious practice in schools _____ 54

Richardson: “what we're seeing is a full-on attack on the public school system.” Richardson blames “two billionaires” for wanting to “privatize” public schools. _____ 55

Schools closing? Don’t blame school districts. Schools failing? Don’t let the state intervene. All Richardson is campaigning on for education is more money. _____ 56

Richardson dismisses parental and taxpayer concerns about indecent books as pushing “book bans.” Richardson stated, “if you've allowed your child to have a cellphone, I really don't understand what the problem is with a book, if they have a smartphone.” _____ 58

Richardson says there is no indoctrination in public schools because teachers don’t have enough time. Richardson admits that she must “clear up” the “misinformation our kids come in with,” but insists that is not indoctrinating. _____ 59

Richardson doesn’t want prayer in school. Richardson: “A child can pray whenever they want to. What they took out of the schools was an adult being able to prophesize to a kid, to tell a kid your religion is bad and mine is good...” _____ 60

Richardson wants to raise property taxes. Richardson: “while property tax relief sounds great, it's going to hurt your city. It's going to hurt your school community overall.” _____ 61

Richardson thinks if you are “pro-life” you are actually “pro control over a woman.” Richardson spreads the “misinformation” that Republicans are planning to ban birth control. _____ 62

Dawn dons the tinfoil hat. According to Richardson, Republicans are trying to stop women from being able to buy homes by pushing the SAVE Act and “other little things that they're sliding into.” She doesn’t explain her conspiracy theory. _____ 63

Richardson believes Tylenol does not affect pregnant women. _____ 64

Richardson is upset about the ending of DEI. _____ 65

Richardson embraces “democratic socialism” and insists it’s not the same as socialism. Richardson wants America to be more like Canada and France. The graphic she posts mentions Sweden, but not that Sweden is moving away from socialism. _____ 66

Richardson reposted a video from “Grouchy Socialists Ride Again” _____ 69

Richardson thinks school choice is “about control and ultimately getting rid of the public school system.” _____ 70

In response to a school shooting, Richardson claims people should rise up for “common sense gun laws” like they did to make Cracker Barrel change back their logo. _____ 71

Richardson contributed to Brady PAC, a federal PAC supporting candidates that favor gun control. Brady PAC supports reenacting the assault weapons ban. _____ 72

Richardson thanks the Democrat representatives who fled the state to break quorum. ____ 73

Richardson gives a shout out to Gene Wu. Wu, the leader of the Texas House Democrats, faced heavy criticism after he advocated for racialized politics where minorities, “realize they have the same oppressor,” and “take over this country” from the evil “white” people. _____ 74

Richardson bashes “vouchers” for private schools. She also rails against teacher-led prayer in school. However, Richardson went to Martin Luther High School, a private Christian school in New York City. _____ 78

Richardson claims school choice will take money from public schools and “that’s going to hurt out economy as well as our children” _____ 85

Richardson claimed school choice supporters “really want all schools to become Christian centers of indoctrination, where they can push their narrative” _____ 87

Richardson states she has “gone to private schools all my whole life, from first grade all the way through college.” _____ 88

The system over students. It's all about the money for Richardson. Richardson hates that people may choose to send their kids to a better school because it may mean less money for the public school system: “for every kid that leaves the public school system to take this voucher, we lose funding.” _____ 89

Does Richardson want to undermine discipline in the classroom? Richardson: “teachers should be there to teach, they should not be there to discipline, that’s every-somebody else’s job.” _____ 92

Richardson tells teachers to “stop voting the way your spouse votes.” _____ 93

Leftwing misinformation about abortion, leading to offensive characterization that miscarriages are the same as abortions. Richardson got her facts wrong about U.S. Rep. Kat Cammack from Florida, claiming that she was a Senator who had to get a “special dispensation” from the governor to get an abortion that she needed. _____ 94

Richardson: “I am very concerned about the choices that they have or don't have anymore when it comes to their healthcare. We have got to fight for our women's rights. Rights, our rights to our bodies. No one should have priority over our bodies.” _____ 98

“As a mother and a woman, I have more rights to my body than my daughters do at their age. We cannot have that” _____ 99

Richardson supports Medicaid expansion: “When you have a person who, again, is not getting the health care that they need, and it gets critical mass, and they have to go in, and they don't have insurance, we all pick up that tab anyway, so we're gonna pay one way or another, aren't we?” _____ 100

Richardson: “The first thing I want to do is help repeal the six-week abortion ban. Abortion is health care.” _____ 102

Richardson has recently read Caste by Isabel Wilkerson and recommends it to everybody to read. Caste has been criticized for adhering “to the antiracist and Critical Race Theory narratives that have ascended to the forefront of racial discourse” and being a “grievance narrative” that perpetuates the “myth of white depravity and black victimhood.” _____ 104

Richardson takes the “bold” position that “healthcare should be affordable for all citizens” and provides no further explanation for her policies. _____ 107

Awkward. Richardson did an interview with a local news channel that was uploaded without editing. Footage shows Richardson awkwardly standing in front of the camera and telling the interviewer what she wants to talk about, all with loud construction noise in the background. _____ 110

Beto O’Rourke is a big fan of Dawn Richardson, filming an endorsement video with her in 2024. “When Dawn wins, it will mean ..Texas is living up to its values and fulfilling its promise” 111

Richardson thanks Bernie Sanders and reposts his video from December 2024 about how America is turning into an oligarchy. _____ 113

Richardson supports amnesty for illegal immigrants: “If you didn’t come in right, hey, let’s get it right.” _____ 114

Richardson thinks people shouldn’t care about illegal immigrants coming here because they are working and some of them come on planes and cars. _____ 116

Richardson on raising the minimum wage and fast food jobs having a living wage: “Oh, and I love this one. Well, they wanted to make more money, they would have gone to college. So, then, if everybody goes to college, who's going to do those jobs?” _____ 118

Who does Richardson look up to for immigration policy? Why AOC of course. Richardson states “it’s not about illegal immigration” and shares a clip of AOC stating that temporary protective status (TPS) or student visas being revoked or allowed to expire is about attacking “documented” immigrants. Well, if their documentation runs out and they are not allowed to be in the country, then they would be illegal immigrants at that point. _____ 121

Richardson shared a video of AOC explaining her Public Banking Act (cosponsored with Rashida Tlaib) with the caption “The more you know.” _____ 122

Richardson attacks black conservatives. Richardson was “shaking her head” when she posted a graphic circling black Republican Byron Donalds refusing to vote for a symbolic leftist resolution “condemning white supremacy” and specifically the “Great Replacement” theory, meanwhile Democrats celebrate that white people are going to become a minority. ____ 124

Richardson got her covid vaccine, and she wants you to know it. _____ 127

Richardson thinks it’s no big deal to make you wait 10 full days before you can buy a gun. 128

In 2025, Richardson gave money to NY Attorney General Leticia James. James is famous for her lawfare against Trump. _____ 129

Richardson reported a $250 campaign contribution from Megan Hull, a California-based activist and daughter of billionaire Blair Hull. Megan Hull “sits on the board of the Hull Family Foundation, which funds a variety of left-of-center advocacy groups including NARAL, the American Civil Liberties Union, Planned Parenthood, and the Council on American-Islamic Relations... In 2006, Megan Hull co-founded the Secretary of State Project, an effort sponsored by members of the Democracy Alliance and [] George Soros.” _____ 130

Richardson received $10,000 from Tomas Torres of Houston in her 2024 campaign. Torres is a prolific donor to Texas Democrats like Beto and Talarico, and nationally including $5,000 to the Muslim Lieutenant Governor of Virginia whose 2025 election was celebrated by CAIR. ____ 132

In her two campaigns for house district 54, Richardson has taken over $13,000 from Solange Hommel of Killeen. Hommel and Richardson appear often together. Hommel has encouraged people to sign the “May Day Strong” pledge to tax the rich and abolish ICE. _____ 137

Richardson: “Some people want to say, oh, let's just get rid of gas and oil. I mean, that's going to eventually happen.” _____ 145

Misinformation! Voter suppression! A video on Richardson’s 2026 campaign website tells visitors to “Vote Novemeber [sic] 5! Its [sic] a new Dawn!”. November 5, 2026 is the Thursday after election day. _____ 147

Mrs. Dawn Williams-Richardson has been in the education profession for over forty years. She served in varying capacities over the decades starting out as a tutor-Counselor in the Higher Education Preparation Program at LeMoyne College in Syracuse New York during her early college years in 1979. During this time, she states, her passion for education was kindled. Her first full-time teaching position came at her Alma mater, Martin Luther High School in Maspeth, a borough of Queens in New York City. Her adventurous spirit saw her branch out to other education opportunities in New York, then, to Hawaii where she met her military spouse. The two embarked on raising a family while Dawn continued her education career. Their travels took them next to Louisiana and finally Texas. Mrs. Richardson capped off her illustrious education career serving as the Assistant Principal-Student Activity Coordinator for Robert M. Shoemaker High School in Killeen Texas in 2020. The many accolades she has earned along her educational journey include; Teacher of the Month & Year awards, she served as President of the Killeen Education Association, and Chairperson of the Texas State Teachers Association Black Caucus. At the heart of the lawsuit is L.W., a 16-year-old transgender girl, whose family contends that the law violates the Equal Protection Clause and interferes with parental rights. Represented by the American Civil Liberties Union, they argue that the ban is an unconstitutional intrusion into private medical decisions.

Late payments

All property tax bills have a payment due date. If your payment is not received or postmarked by the payment due date, your payment is considered late.

The Department of Finance is required to charge interest on late property taxes. The interest compounds daily, so the later you make your payment, the more interest you will owe.

Richardson takes credit for fighting for reimbursement from the state for veteran tax exemptions. The irony is that she posts a story about the Republican incumbent doing just that.

Dawn Richardson for Texas Rep. District 54
April 14 · 🌐

This was an issue that I campaigned on and I am glad to see that it passed and that all veterans will receive this benefit. In the past, the loss of property taxes was 13 million due to the exemption. The state only provided 2 million. Now, due to rising costs the loss of revenue to Killeen will be around 15 million with the state reimbursing around 967,000. Instead of adding money when they added more cities, they simply took what they were giving and split it.

This is one of those unfunded mandates that I have harped on during this campaign and it needs to stop.

Glad to have brought attention to this issue and I will not let up until it is rectified.

The SAVE Act is not about voter fraud. Gov. Abbott turned over our voter data to the government when Trump asked for it. They have probably gone through it with a fine tooth comb as the saying goes. Don't you think if there was significant fraud, they would be blasting it by now?

The reason Mike Johnson cannot name a single fraud case the SAVE act would stop is because the SAVE act is not a bill to stop voter fraud it's a bill to suppress the vote.

Richardson (segment begins 26:43): “The majority, those amendments only benefit those who have money, you know. Let’s just keep it, and I cannot believe how many people voted and passed all of those, because we, too, we have - I have a friend here who, her name is Solange Hommel. She does research on the legislature, and she also broke down all of the amendments, the pros and the cons, so you can see both sides... and we gave that out, I told you, know, sent people to, to the, the information

I had, people call me, you know, how do I break these down? I sent those because a lot of people, like I said, they read the first line, like you just said, with the women, they read the first line, but I bet you they didn't go any further in it, and I bet you some folks didn't even see them till they got to the, to the, to the voting booth."

Richardson: “You know, oh, we got illegals voting, they had to have a state ID to go vote, guys. So, I think a lot of it that's out there is just fear and nonsense”

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_OVFkey3-ts; video archived here

◆ Richardson (segment begins 21:50):

One, we need more polls, but the problem, the problem is now is finding people to work, so we not only need more polls, but we might, we need more security at those polls, because in this climate it is so unfortunate, the anger, the folks lashing out at each other, because you don't vote like me, you don't, you know, you don't want the same things I want, instead of understanding that we all have differences, and we are allowed to vote for, and, and believe in what we want to, as long as it doesn't hurt you. We're not coming in your house and doing anything to you, so we should be able to to vote the way we, we, we choose. But you got folks who are trying to intimidate folks at the polls, folks walking around on the outskirts with guns and carrying on, thinking that you know this is okay, and it's not, so we first we need more polls, we need more access to those polls, we need to, we already have to show an ID, so this thing about folks with ID and all of this, I'm not sure where all that came from, because I've had to show an ID as long as I can remember to vote, so you already have a valid ID, some state that you know, some state agency gave it to you. So, why are we questioning this? You know, oh, we got illegals voting, they had to have a state ID to go vote, guys. So, I think a lot of it that's out there is just fear and nonsense, and folks not doing the research on their own, and we've got to get through that, we've got, we've got to make sure that people are educated on why it's important to vote, not who to vote for, that's a personal choice, but why it's important and what's at stake, and how it affects them, but we really do need to get rid of these voter suppression laws, these drop boxes, you know, one drop box in Harris County, 2 million people. They wanted one drop box in Harris County. Well, that might work in a county that only has 1000 people or 500 people, because we do have various counties.

but one in Harris County, maybe if you said one drop box per 500 people, that would make it more equitable and make make more sense, and so that's what we have to get to. We have to realize that we do have these varying degrees, sizes of districts, and we have to make sure that we have the resources for those various sizes, instead of trying to find one fit fits all.

Dawn Richardson for Texas Rep. District 54

Texas has gone from having 22 data centers to 341 in the past 3 years with over 200 more planned.

We have seen no impact studies on people that live close to these and no environmental impact data either.

What is the plan to deal with situations like those in this video for our fellow Texans?

What safeguards and measures have been put in place to compensate those affected?

And for those who will say we have to build these to keep up or ahead of China or other countries: China has 449, Japan has 259, Russia has 251, South Korea has 147, and the U.S. has 5400. See less

Richardson is upset that a bill was passed allowing religious practice in schools

 Dawn Richardson for Texas Rep. District 54
February 18 · 🌐

Bravo KISD. This bill is unnecessary as students are already allowed to pray in our schools. Those who have special religious practices are allowed to observe them, and we have religious clubs such as the Fellowship of Christian athletes. This would have been more unnecessary paperwork and another unfunded mandate considering the resources it will take to implement and stay in compliance. Again, no one has stopped prayer occurring in schools. What stopped is adults pushing their religious beliefs on children whose beliefs may be different. Let's walk the walk. Schools closing? Don't blame school districts. Schools failing? Don't let the state intervene. All Richardson is campaigning on for education is more money.

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled “The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box,” Richardson stated the big picture is the state of Texas cutting budgets not mismanagement by school districts:

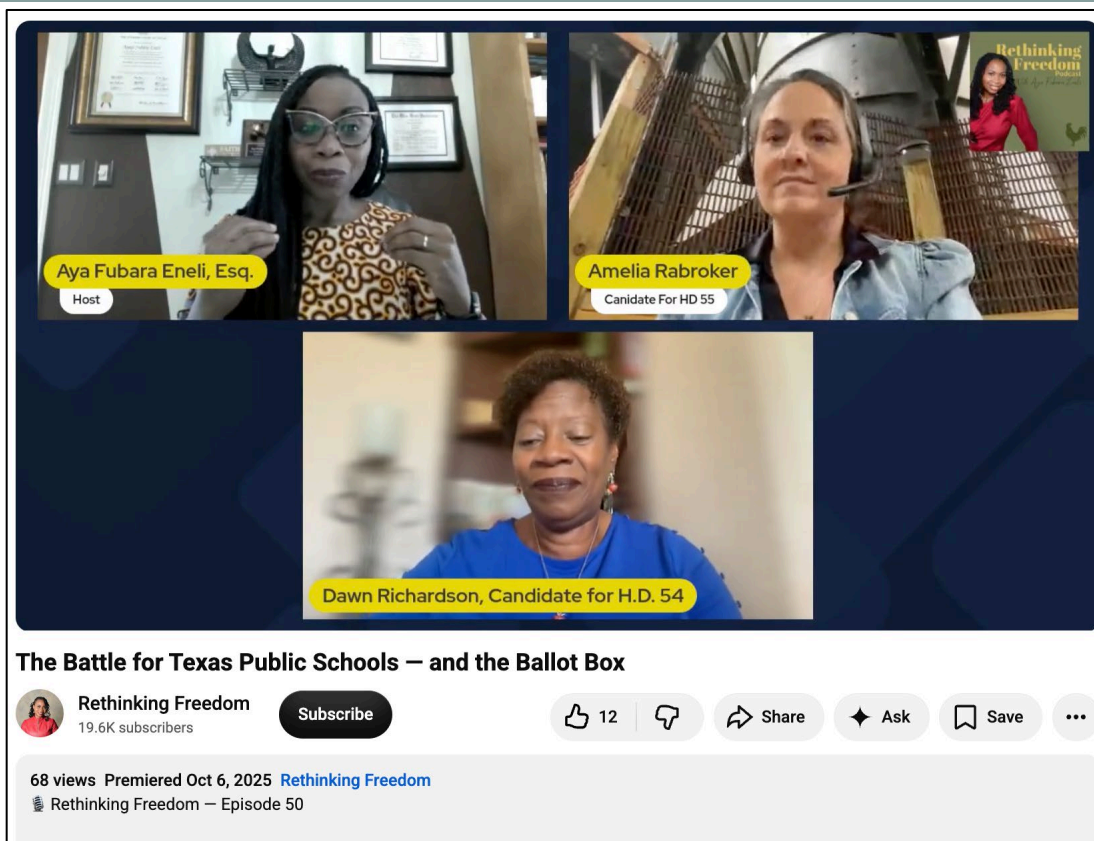

[timestamp 5:00]

RICHARDSON: We just got a funding increase that we haven't had since 2019 Now, yes, they put in $8.3 billion into public education, but you have to think about the fact that we have 5.5 million students, public school students in the state of Texas that averages out to less than $2,000 per student, and then there were stipulations on that money on how it could be spent, so it really went mostly to teacher raises, which they need, they need sorely, they need more than they got, but because there wasn't enough money in there to keep the schools going. Now districts are having to make those hard choices. Do we try to keep all these schools open and go under, or do we start consolidating because we do not have the funds? For example, here in Killeen, the system is losing the federal impact aid money over $10 billion so therefore— $10 million— so therefore they're going to have to cut something.

... and again, people are not, people are blaming locally. Oh, it's the school system, but they're not looking at the big picture. This is what we were talking about, too, in educating ourselves and getting more civically engaged and knowing what's going on. They're having to make these cuts because they're losing funding, you know. Yes, we're losing students, but we're also losing funding, and so now we have to look at, and then the state is talking about coming in and taking over schools because of poor performance. So now they're taking those schools and trying to roll them into schools that are academically performing at what the state calls, you know, an acceptable level. And so now what we're doing is what growing schools putting more kids into buildings, less services? It's a setup for failure, instead of the state reworking the Robin Hood situation, and making sure that districts that need the money is now getting it, because this system has been in place so long that there are districts now receiving Robin Hood money that really doesn't need that recapture money, and they need to rework that. Secondly, they're not even giving all that recapture money back to the districts, as you brought up earlier, before we came on air. We're talking about Austin. Austin has to give $78 million to the recapture system. Why couldn't they keep some of that, so that they can keep their schools open?

HOST: Yeah, because they're, they're anticipating closing 13 schools.

RICHARDSON: Yes, but people don't realize they're having to give Austin School District has to give away $78 million or more to other districts.

◆ Richardson’s 2024 Ballotpedia candidate connection survey:

What is the first bill you would introduce if elected? ▼

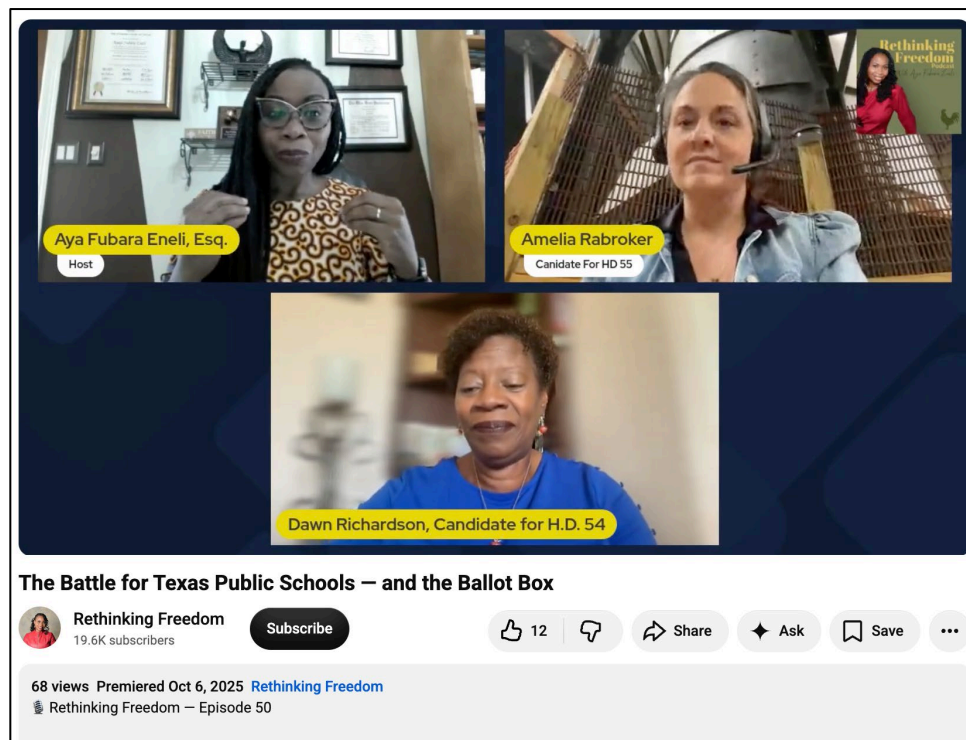

Codify that no public funds can be use for private education. Public education should be fully funded to the national average or higher. Along with that, the minimum teacher pay should be at the national level, with state funding going to supplement that in districts who are cash poor. Most new teachers leave the profession within the first 5 years of teaching. Among the many factors that are cited is affordability of the area in which they live. Teachers should not have to work two or three jobs to survive. Working extra jobs, does affect their performance in the classroom. Revisit the Recapture statutes to make sure that monies are being distributed fairly and that those school districts that in need are the districts receiving those funds. However, the lionshare of that funding should come directly from the state. There are districts due to their tax base, could fully fund these mandates if they were able to keep the majority of their tax revenue in district. The state then, should step up and fill the gaps in those districts who are tax poor.

Richardson dismisses parental and taxpayer concerns about indecent books as pushing “book bans.” Richardson stated, “if you've allowed your child to have a cellphone, I really don't understand what the problem is with a book, if they have a smartphone.”

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled “The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box,” Richardson stated the big picture is the state of Texas cutting budgets not mismanagement by school districts:

That's also what's happened with the book ban. If you look at the folks who started the book ban, it was one man, and he has gotten hundreds of books on this list, one man, and that's ridiculous. That one person can have that much power over the rest of us. Richardson says there is no indoctrination in public schools because teachers don't have enough time. Richardson admits that she must "clear up" the "misinformation our kids come in with," but insists that is not indoctrinating.

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled "The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box," Richardson stated

As a 39-year educator who has taught in four different states, we don't have time to indoctrinate. Okay, we just don't. You got 45 minutes to teach you to teach your subject, because you're going to be tested at the end of the year. You do not have time to indoctrinate. Do you have time for good, healthy discussion? If a kid brings something up, well, of course, you're supposed to be an educated, certified professional, and you should be talking in a, in a professional way to make sure that our students have the correct knowledge, because we don't want them to leave our schools not knowing the basics, and that includes how to get along in society. You'd be surprised how much misinformation our kids come in with, and that we have to clear up. But no, no one is in there indoctrinating any kid.

... And so, no, nobody's in there indoctrinating kids. Do we have a few bad apples? That's in every profession, that's in every profession. So, we should not judge one, you know, because you got one or two teachers that are bad over here, that all teachers are doing that, that's wrong, that's like saying the same thing about doctors or lawyers or anybody else, you don't judge a whole by a few, but overall, no, we don't, like I said, I've done this 39 years, we, we don't have time to indoctrinate. We're not indoctrinated. We're just trying to help them grow up to be stable, supporting human beings that they know they have a safety net, a secondary safety net. We are here to support the family, not pull it apart. This is part of that community, that village.

Richardson doesn't want prayer in school. Richardson: "A child can pray whenever they want to. What they took out of the schools was an adult being able to prophesize to a kid, to tell a kid your religion is bad and mine is good..."

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled "The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box," Richardson stated

it's like when folks say they took prayer out of the schools, they did not take prayer out of the schools. A child can pray whenever they want to. What they took out of the schools was an adult being able to prophesize to a kid, to tell a kid your religion is bad and mine is good, and you have to pray my way, and all of that. They took that from us, which we, which is good, because I don't want any adult teaching my child about God. That's my job in my church.

Richardson wants to raise property taxes. Richardson:
“while property tax relief sounds great, it's going to hurt your city. It's going to hurt your school community overall.”

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled “The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box,” Richardson stated

You know, people are all excited about getting property tax relief, and I get that, you know, because that's going to be more money for in their pockets, or what have you. I'll just use as an example right now the 100% disabled veterans property tax, right? They get, if there are 100% disabled, they don't pay property taxes. They listen. I thank them for their service. They deserve that. That was a state mandate... For example, in the city of Killeen, they need $15 million to cover that loss, the state was only sending them 2 million. Now that the state has offered it to all veterans, no matter where they live, because it used to be only if you boarded a military installation, but now it's wherever you live. Okay, they didn't raise the money they allotted for that, so Killeen itself, that 2 million is down to under a million, it's like $968,000 So now Killeen has to make up that loss, so they're now proposing where the disabled veteran's wife, if she's left, to get that property tax, too. You know that that exemption, too. But guess what, that's going to do. That's going to lower how much money comes back into your cities, into your schools. Guess who gets hurt? Your city services and your school system. That's going to be less money. So, while property tax relief sounds great, it's going to hurt your city. It's going to hurt your school community overall.

Richardson thinks if you are “pro-life” you are actually “pro control over a woman.” Richardson spreads the “misinformation” that Republicans are planning to ban birth control.

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled “The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box,” Richardson stated

Timestamp 46:50

We have this six week ban that my opponent was one of the co-sponsors of, but now they're also trying to get rid of birth control, so How can you tell a person to be responsible, you know, she shouldn't have put herself in that place in the first place. And then you want to take away the one thing that helps her stay out of that position. So, you're not pro-life, you're pro control...it's about control over a woman. Let's just keep it real, you know. If we really cared about women, we wouldn't have one of the highest infant mortality rates. We wouldn't have one of the highest maternal mortality rates in this country. We wouldn't have the second highest number of children in foster care in the foster care system

Dawn dons the tinfoil hat. According to Richardson, Republicans are trying to stop women from being able to buy homes by pushing the SAVE Act and “other little things that they're sliding into.” She doesn’t explain her conspiracy theory.

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled “The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box,” Richardson stated

The biggest reason is I am concerned about our future. As a 39 year educator, I am concerned about the way they are trying to dismantle our education system and keeping our young people from knowing the truth and the knowledge. I, as a, as a mother of two daughters, I am concerned over the rights of women and why are we regulating women's bodies and nobody else? Why is a woman being subjected to all of these rules and regulations just to make health choices of her own? Her choices should be between her, her God, and her doctor. Nobody else should be a part of that. She should be able to buy a home, etc. without worrying about it, because if people forget we didn't get the right to do those things until 1974 and they're working on trying to get rid of that with the Save Act and other little things that they're sliding into, and women need to be paying attention to that, they're trying to send us backwards...

What pushed Sweden away from socialism?

SEPTEMBER 7, 2022 RIKARD WESTERBERG

THEMES: POLITICS, SCANDINAVIA, SWEDEN

Sweden's radical economic policies during the Cold War decades inspired socialists worldwide. However, its wage earner funds found little support and instead generated a new vision of Sweden, a society centred on free market principles rather than collectives.

Engelsberg Ideas 09/07/2022

The Democratic Socialists Need a New Model

The capitalist enterprise is alive and well, even in that “paragon of collectivism,” as the Wall Street Journal put it: Sweden.

“Today, nearly half of primary healthcare clinics are privately owned, many by private-equity firms,” reporter Tom Fairless observed this week. “One in three public high schools is privately run, up from 20% in 2011. School operators are listed on the stock exchange.”

In addition, Sweden’s market-oriented reforms have transformed it into an investment hub. “Sweden’s economy is expected to grow by around 2% a year through 2030,” the report added — a level of growth that would keep pace with the United States and eclipse its industrialized European neighbors, like France and Germany.

Even more impressive is what Sweden is doing with its newfound wealth: shrinking the size of the state. Stockholm has lowered its overall tax burden, reduced its health-care and welfare expenditures, and created incentives for private-sector actors and charities to take on what were once government mandates.

National Review 05/13/2026

◆ Sweden being socialist is not that straightforward.

DECEMBER 05, 2023

Sweden's much more 'free market' than you think

EST. READ TIME 4 MIN.

By: Johan Norberg

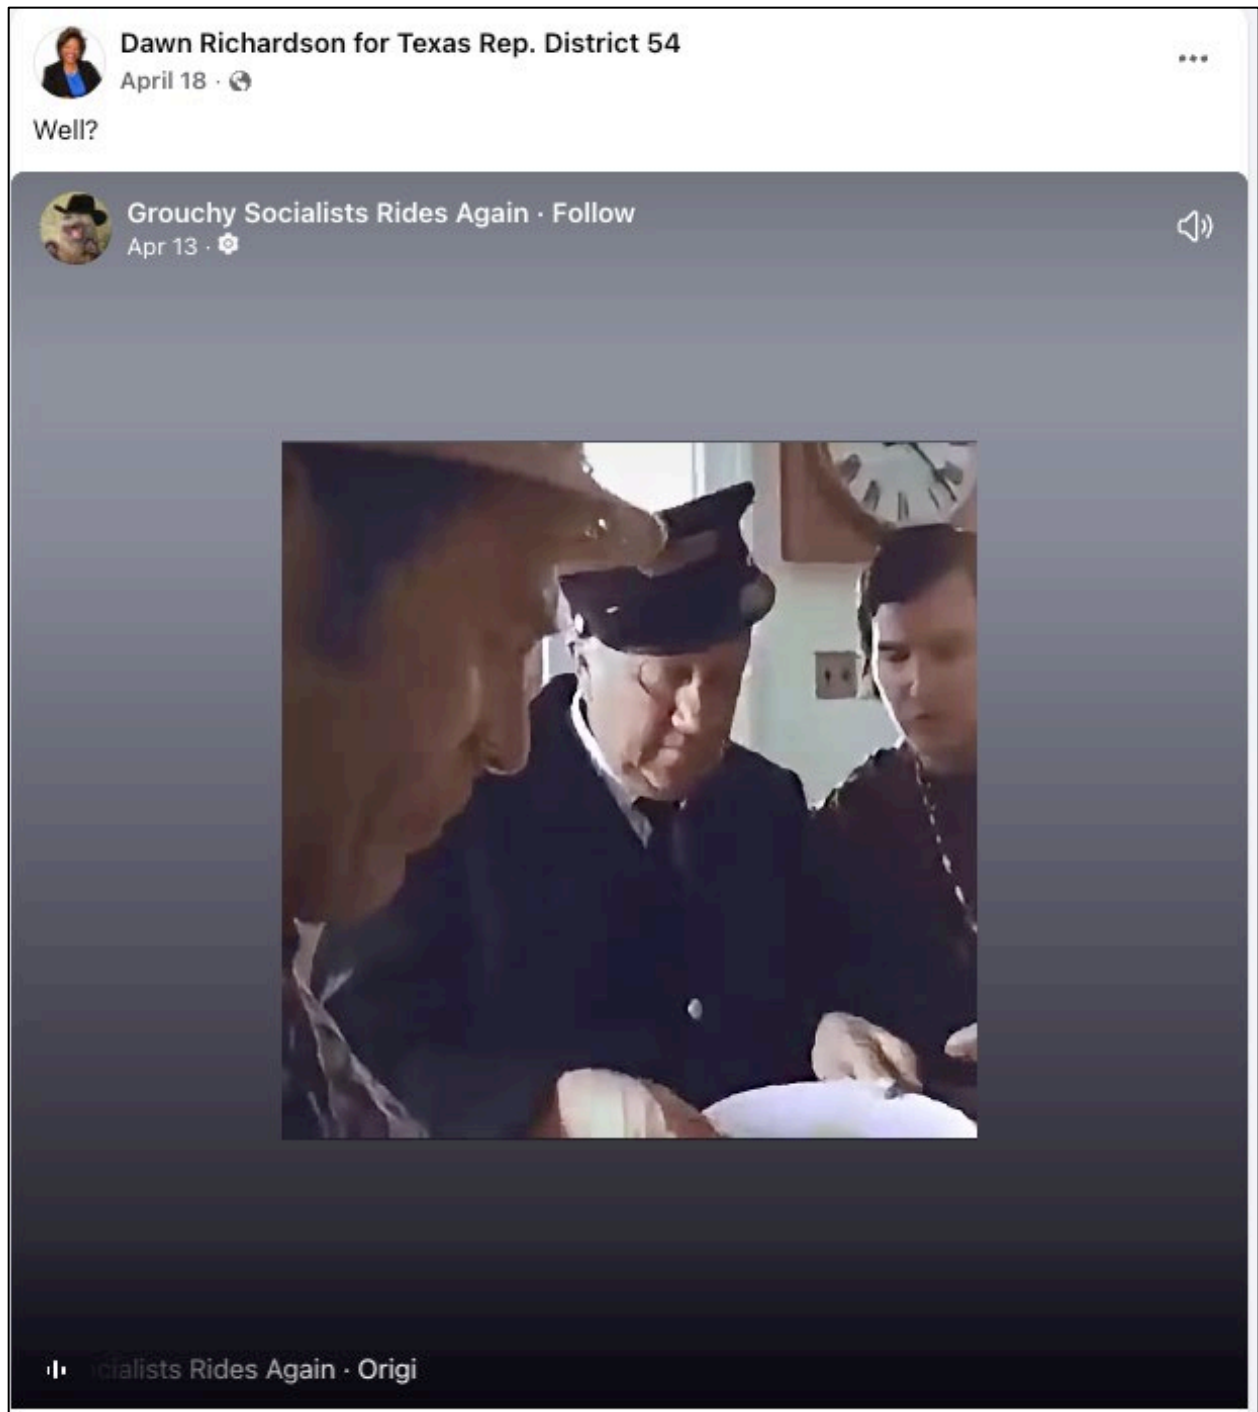

When leftist politicians around the world are asked to name one example of successful socialism, they often mention my country, Sweden. In their mind, Sweden is the country of government-produced milk and honey, equally distributed. A gentle democratic form of socialism that takes from the rich and gives to the poor and the state takes care of everything.

As I show in my new book, The Mirage of Swedish Socialism (published by the Fraser Institute), this is just like the world's never-ending fascination with Swedish pop group ABBA—a result of not having updated one's perceptions since the 1970s. This was the short period when Sweden began to set itself apart with a very large government sector, high taxes and massive regulation. Until then, we had a more open economy and lower taxes than most other industrialized countries. This was the free-market model that turned Sweden into one of the world's richest countries.

When Swedish politicians started to use those resources for massive redistribution in the 1970s, it attracted the attention of the world. Here was a country that doubled the government's share of the economy, and yet, was a very rich place. But this did not show that socialism was working. It was more like the old joke—how do you end up with a small fortune? You start with a large one.

About

The assassination attempt on Jim Brady, President Reagan's press secretary, and the steadfast resolve of his wife, Sarah, ignited a movement that forever changed the fight against gun violence. Their personal sacrifice and leadership became the very heartbeat of our cause.

It is in their enduring legacy that Brady PAC was formed, leading up to the 2018 midterm elections, as an essential counterweight to the insidious dark money Super PACs unleashed by the gun industry. Supporting Brady PAC is essential because it directly combats the outsized influence of the gun industry, and places the focus of political candidates back on saving lives.

We stand on the shoulders of the giant of this movement, proudly upholding the policy ideals championed by our sister organization, Brady.

We exist to elect leaders at every level of government – local, state, and federal – who share our determination to build a safer America. These are the champions who will enact and relentlessly defend life-saving, common-sense gun safety policies, including universal background checks, reenactment of the assault weapons ban, and implementation of extreme risk protection orders, among others. We fight tirelessly so that no family has to endure the heartbreak that Jim and Sarah knew, and so that our homes, our schools, and our communities can finally be free from the pain of gun violence.

Texas Democrat blasted for telling Latino, Black, Asian people to unite against 'oppressor,' 'take over' US

State representative Gene Wu said he meant 'Republicans' were oppressor of minorities after 2024 podcast clip resurfaced

By Alexander Hall · Fox News

The leader of Democrats in the Texas House of Representatives, state Rep. Gene Wu, is facing conservative backlash after a clip resurfaced of him calling on various racial groups to unite against their common "oppressor."

Vargas argued that the future of the United States will be decided by Texas, asking Wu to give him the big picture. Wu said that one of the powerful forces driving modern politics, particularly regarding immigration, is that "White people" in America are concerned about becoming a racial and political minority.

"The scary thing for me is that what is driving this newest round of anti-immigrant sentiment is purely a sense of White nationalism," Wu said.

"That there is a sense of, 'America really just belongs to White people,' that this was that a lot of people believe that God gave America to White people to rule, and that any time that immigrants, minorities make progress in this country, that that is seen as a slight against them," he continued.

Both agreed that White people are already or almost a racial minority in Texas, with Wu clarifying that for now, they are still the majority of people who are able to vote. The host later asked Wu to talk about his majority-Latino district and the relationship between the Latino and Asian communities, particularly between those of both groups who are immigrants.

"I think you've hit exactly the right point," Wu said. "It's not just Latinos. It's not just Asians. It's not just African Americans. It's everybody. Right? We, our country and the forces that be, the powers that be, have spent tremendous time, effort and money to make sure that those groups are never united, that they always see each other as enemies, as competitors, without ever realizing that they share one thing in common, that their oppressors all are the same. The oppression comes from one place.

"I always tell people the day the Latino, African-American, Asian and other communities realize that they are — that they share the same oppressor is the day we start winning, because we are the majority in this country now," he continued.

"We have the ability to take over this country and to do what is needed for everyone and to make things fair."

The 2024 comments resurfaced on social media, causing Wu to face backlash from fellow Texans.

"Gene Wu is a radical racist who hates millions of Texans just because they're [W]hite. This is who the modern Democrat Party is," Texas Attorney General and Republican Senate candidate Ken Paxton wrote.

Former Texas GOP Chairman Matt Rinaldi wrote, "This clip is being widely circulated for its advocacy for [W]hite genocide. People need to realize that this isn't some random Democrat backbencher. This is the Texas House Democrat caucus LEADER."

"The Democrat party is built on bigotry," Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, replied.

Rep. Chip Roy, also of Texas, called on Wu to resign.

"Unlike many Democrats, he admits his racism against [W]hite people and call to 'take over this country.' He should resign or the TX House should strip him of any power," he wrote. "Another reason to pass my PAUSE Act. Stop importing people who hate you."

After the backlash, Wu appeared to try to backtrack and claim that he was not referring to White people, but Republicans.

The Houston Chronicle's Evan Mintz, reporting on the viral clip from the longer interview, noted that "nowhere in the clip does Wu talk about [W]hite people."

However, Wu had referred to "White people" and their racial anxiety of becoming a minority in America before the segment shown in the clip.

"Just to clarify, I even called up Wu to ask who, exactly, he meant by 'shared oppressor,'" Mintz wrote. "His answer: Republicans."

"It is undeniable that Republicans have spent the past 50 years beating down communities," Wu told the writer.

"To their credit, some Republicans engaged with what Wu actually said, swiping at him for dividing the American people into subgroups in the first place — which, yes, he did do," Mintz reported.

Wu's office didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

Bravo KISD. This bill is unnecessary as students are already allowed to pray in our schools. it's like when folks say they took prayer out of the schools, they did not take prayer out of the schools. A child can pray whenever they want to. What they took out of the schools was an adult being able to prophesize to a kid, to tell a kid your religion is bad and mine is good, and you have to pray my way, and all of that. They took that from us, which we, which is good, because I don't want any adult teaching my child about God. That's my job in my church..

◆ Richardson (segment begins 2:34):

My district, as you just pointed out, due to gerrymandering, I am what they call the donut, and then in the middle is District 55 My district is heavily military. We have one of the largest base in the free world, so to speak. It was Fort Hood. It is now called Fort Cavazos. So we have that influence. 70% of our students are at the free or reduced lunch spectrum. We also have the large, the second largest employer in our area is the educational system, is K I S D. So this voucher, even though they call it educational savings accounts, we know that's going to just take money out of the public schools and put them into private schools. That's going to hurt our economy as well as our children, because we're going to be already at the point where our district, right now, is having to have these hard conversations about where to make budget cuts. That should not be that $6 billion that was in that bill when that voucher was stripped. Then my opponent pulled back that $6 billion that should have been given to public education. They should, that should have been allowed to come to the floor, voted on, and given to public education, but it wasn't. And who gets hurt? Our children get hurt, our teachers get hurt, our community gets hurt, and so right now they're struggling and trying to figure out where to shift money around to fund the resources that are necessary and needed to educate our children, and that is a big conversation here, very big, and people are very disappointed when they hear about this issue, and what could have, what could have solved it already. So we need to get to the state house, so we can say, "Hey, we don't want these vouchers, we want to fund fully our public education system."

- ◆ Richardson wrote in her 2024 Ballotpedia candidate connection survey: "Vouchers will weaken the public school systems further and will not ultimately help those students that those who support them say they will"

Please list below 3 key messages of your campaign. What are the main points you want voters to remember about your goals for your time in office? ▼

- * Oppose all school voucher plans. Vouchers will weaken the public school systems further and will not ultimately help those students that those who support them say they will
 - Support fully funding public school system to the average national level or higher.

 - Build in a COLA that is triggered by measurable economic factors and not by the whim of the legislature
 - Support parental choice within the public school system.
 - * Support reproductive rights and freedoms

◆ Richardson (segment begins 10:03):

you have three billionaires who are basically funding this movement, because they think that public schools are the bastion of liberal thought, and they really want all schools to become Christian centers of indoctrination, where they can push their narrative, and being that there's so much money in our politics, that's what our politicians do. They follow what their donors want.

Richardson states she has “gone to private schools all my whole life, from first grade all the way through college.”

The system over students. It's all about the money for Richardson. Richardson hates that people may choose to send their kids to a better school because it may mean less money for the public school system: “for every kid that leaves the public school system to take this voucher, we lose funding.”

- ◆ On a podcast panel discussion titled “The Battle for Texas Public Schools — and the Ballot Box,” Richardson stated:

They're going to say that the billion dollars that they're getting now for vouchers didn't come from the public schools. They're going to say that it came from the comptroller's office, but what they are forgetting to add to that, that people don't realize, is for every kid that leaves the public school system to take this voucher, we lose funding. We lose funding because we are funded by attendance, not by enrollment. [timestamp 29:05]

- ◆ In an interview, Richardson explained why she was running by stating that she has been a member of NEA, KEA (Killeen Educators Association) and TSTA and fighting for their priorities “from almost day one.”

Well, first, first and foremost, my entire career I have been a member of the NEA, National Education Association, and here locally the KEA and state TSTA. I have been on the boots on the ground from almost day one, fighting for teachers' right, fighting for a stronger education through those organizations. So this, for me, probably a logic step that, but it wasn't one, and I, I mean, I thought about politics. I always have. I've been always involved in politics. I've always tried to explain to people what was happening. For example, when I first got here, I could tell that the move was to privatize public education. I've been sounding that alarm since 1993, okay.

You know, I hear that all the time, and you, I know you hear this too. Why should I vote? It, my vote doesn't matter. Well, yes, it does. You know, if there's nothing else you can do, go to that ballot box, go to that ballot box, and stop voting the way your spouse votes. Vote your best interest, vote for the person who has the policies, who have the ideas that are going to benefit you and your profession. Stop letting people treat you like an at-will employee. Leftwing misinformation about abortion, leading to offensive characterization that miscarriages are the same as abortions. Richardson got her facts wrong about U.S. Rep. Kat Cammack from Florida, claiming that she was a Senator who had to get a “special dispensation” from the governor to get an abortion that she needed.

- ◆ Richardson told women, “I don't care what color you are; they're coming after us.” Cammack suffered an ectopic pregnancy that resulted in miscarriage, as the baby had no heartbeat. Hospital staff at first hesitated to provide the medicine but ultimately did when she explained it was legal. Cammack blamed pro-abortion fearmongering, the kind Richardson perpetuates, as causing the confusion. Richardson has a history of equating hospital malpractice treating miscarriages with women not getting care because of abortion bans.

- ◆ In an interview with a fellow Democrat state candidate, Richardson stated:

These women don't understand. They are coming after us. I don't care what color you are, they're coming after us. When you take away a woman's right to her body to make health decisions, and yes, abortion is a health decision. Yes, somebody will say, “Well, what about..” yes, there are elected ones, but you cannot take away the choice. From every single woman, because of a few over here, that's like taking away driving from people, because you got a few who broke the speed limits. Come on, guy. You know this is common sense. People need, that you know, as that legislator, that senator from Florida had to get special dispensation from the governor to get an abortion that she needed, and she was one of the major proponents of the six week abortion ban. Make that make sense.

- ◆ Congresswoman Cammack released a press release when pushing for a new House resolution and set the record straight about what happened, attacking Democrats for “conflating emergency medical care for miscarriages and ectopic pregnancies with elective abortion in order to push a broader narrative.”

July 25, 2025 Press Release

Washington, D.C. — Today, Congresswoman Kat Cammack (FL-03) introduced a House Resolution reaffirming the importance of accurate medical information and guidance for the public, lawmakers and emergency department professionals, treating pregnant women and their unborn children, particularly in the cases involving miscarriage and ectopic pregnancy.

"No woman facing a medical emergency like a miscarriage or ectopic pregnancy should be left in danger because of confusion or misinformation," said Congresswoman Cammack. "This resolution is about reinforcing the importance of long established and clear guidance for doctors so that patients receive quality care and that the public is properly informed on what current law does—and does not—allow."

Background:

Last May, Congresswoman Cammack experienced a life-threatening ectopic pregnancy—a medical emergency in which the embryo implants outside the uterus and cannot survive. Her case, like thousands of others faced by women across the country, required immediate intervention to save her life.

After courageously sharing her experience in the Wall Street Journal, the Congresswoman became the target of vicious backlash. She, her unborn child, her family, and even her staff received an onslaught of death threats and harassment. This deeply personal and painful moment laid bare the consequences of today's toxic political environment surrounding women's healthcare.

More alarmingly, it revealed how reckless and dangerous the abortion lobby's disinformation campaign has become—conflating emergency medical care for miscarriages and ectopic pregnancies with elective abortion in order to push a broader narrative. By weaponizing fear and misrepresenting facts, they are not only endangering the lives of patients but also silencing those who speak the truth. Not a single professional medical, health organization or state law regards treatment for miscarriages or ectopic pregnancies as abortion. Cammack's experience underscores the urgent need for educating the general public, ensuring clarity in policy and civil discourse.

The Congressional Pro-Life Caucus, numerous pro-life and women's advocacy organizations have also voiced their strong condemnation of the threats and harassment against the Congresswoman. Read their full statement here.

These women are someone's baby too. They are living humans and not a host body as a lawmaker referred to pregnant women.

◆ Richardson (segment begins 4:40):

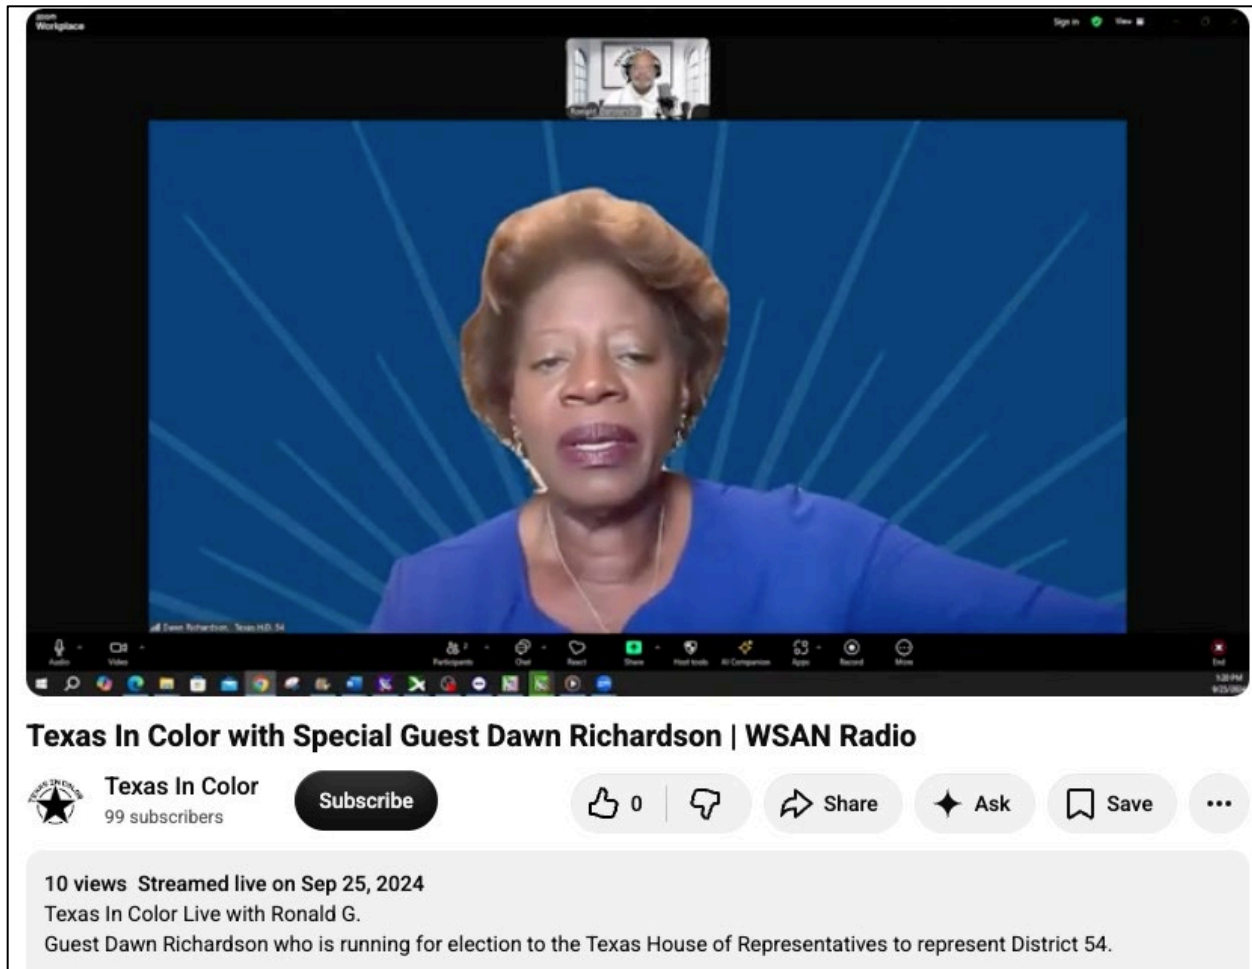

My, my next issue that's very important to me, I have two daughters who are grown, who have no children, and, like a lot of mothers in the state of Texas, I am very concerned about the choices that they have or don't have anymore when it comes to their healthcare. We have got to fight for our women's rights. Rights, our rights to our bodies. No one should have priority over our bodies. We need to make those decisions for ourselves. No one should be making those for us.

“As a mother and a woman, I have more rights to my body than my daughters do at their age. We cannot have that”

Facebook, 02/16/2026

Richardson supports Medicaid expansion: “When you have a person who, again, is not getting the health care that they need, and it gets critical mass, and they have to go in, and they don't have insurance, we all pick up that tab anyway, so we're gonna pay one way or another, aren't we?”

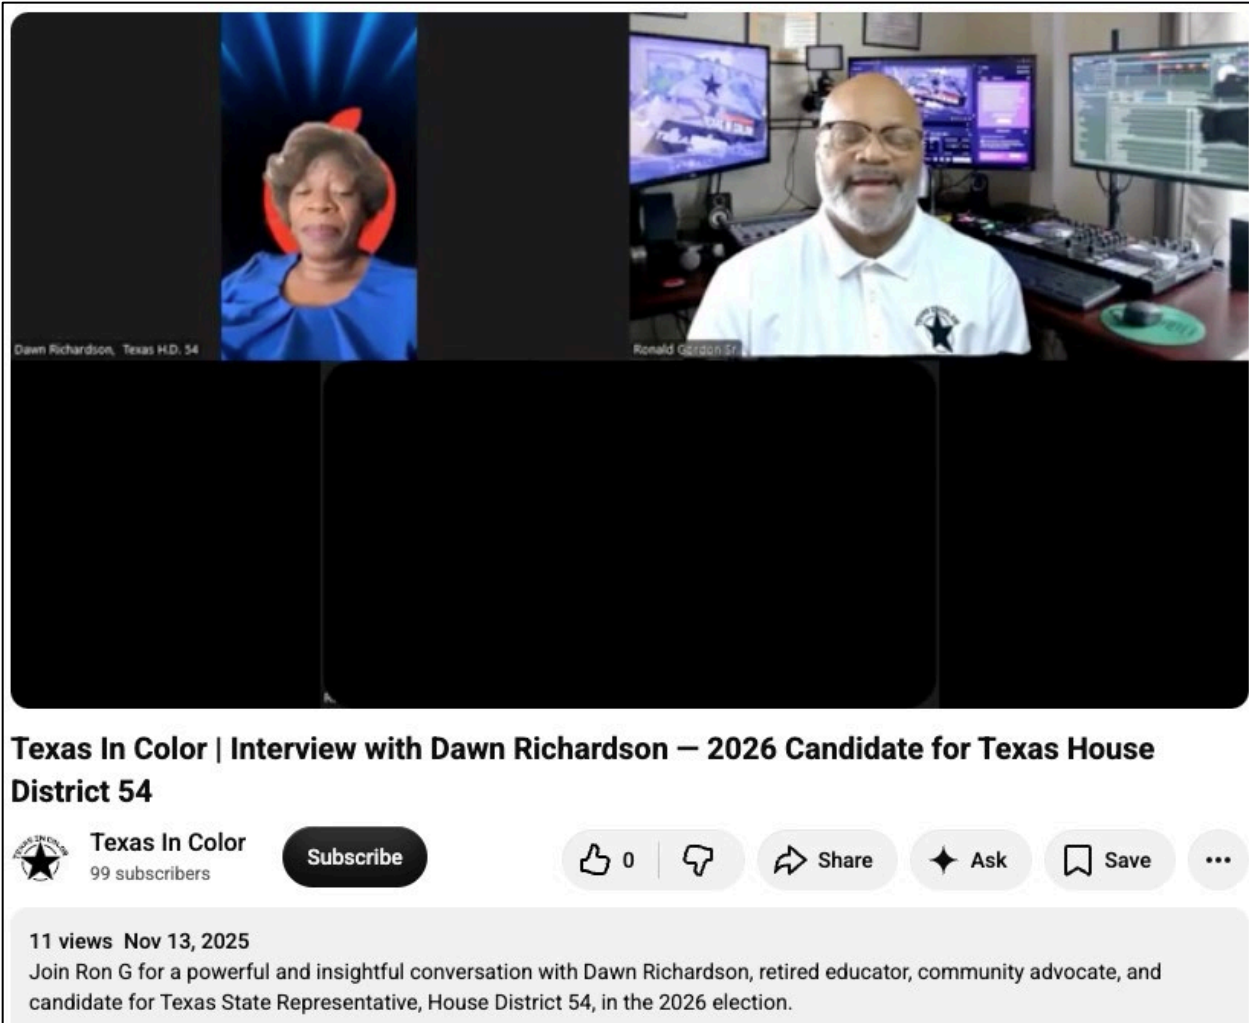

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_OVFkey3-ts; video archived here

- ◆ Richardson was asked, “Do you support Medicaid expansion in Texas?”
- ◆ Richardson (segment begins 19:44):

First of all, yes, I do. I do support. For any program that is going to better the least among us, when we, when we help the least among us, we all benefit, you know. When you have a person who, again, is not getting the health care that they need, and it gets critical mass, and they have to go in, and they don't have insurance, we all pick up that tab anyway, so we're gonna pay one way or another, aren't we? So we might as well look at the programs that are there, such as Medicaid, expand it, and make sure that it's accessible. Let's get rid of some of the hoops that it takes to get on it, make sure that people who get it really need it, and make sure that it's available to them, and that goes right here. We have, yes, we have a free clinic, but we need those resources. We need, we need Medicaid, because there are a lot of people I can tell you personally that don't have any kind of health insurance and are praying every day that nothing happens to them. They can't afford it, and so if we could expand Medicaid, and they could get it, then that means that's just that many more people who are going to be more mentally with you in a job, working for you in a job, and giving you their best, as opposed to worrying about what can happen around the corner. So we benefit, we don't understand, we would benefit from that being proactive with health care. Think about how many diseases and how many things we could prevent if we were more proactive instead of reactive.

Richardson: “The first thing I want to do is help repeal the six-week abortion ban. Abortion is health care.”

◆ Richardson (segment begins 18:26):

Oh, that is a good question. How much time we have? The first thing I want to do is help repeal the six week abortion ban. Abortion is health care. Now there are folks thinking, oh, you just want to kill healthy babies and all that. No, I didn't say that. That's not my choice. You know what I believe in for myself is one thing, but what should be there is every woman should have that right, that choice. I can't tell you how many women I have talked to say my age and said, "God, I wouldn't be here if I came up under the healthcare van. I had an atopic pregnancy and had to have an abortion, and it wasn't found till eight weeks into my pregnancy. You know, I had another lady tell me her baby died and wasn't passing, and she said, "Thank God I wasn't, you know, born this time. She said, "I'd be dead too. I know, you know, personally. Back in the day, I had a teacher whose baby died, and because of this, even the law back then, they had to leave the state so she could get the health care she needed, so she could live. She's a married woman with a 12 year old child in the fall, and the husband said, I'm not losing my wife because of this, and so that choice should be left up to doctors, to medical professionals, that woman. And her God, we have no right to be in the exam rooms of these women and making those kinds of choices, especially when we do not have in place Medicaid, SNAP, all of these benefits to help these children that we claim we want to bring into the world, cuz there's a difference between being to me being pro life and against the board and against abortion and all of this stuff. You can't say that you're pro life and then once the baby's here you don't care about it anymore, you don't make sure that this woman has health care. We have the second highest infant and maternal mortality in this state. That should not be. We have so many gynecologists and obstetricians leaving this state because they're afraid to practice. We have rural areas that have no access to that kind of care that they have to travel hours to get that kind of care, that should not be. We are the eighth largest economy in the world, not just the United States, in the world. There's no reason that we do not have a better health care system than we do. We cannot tell people and dictate to their bodies, and then just leave them to the wind. I think that's absolutely crazy. I have two two daughters who neither one of them have children yet, and I'm deathly afraid for them to have children in the state of Texas.

Richardson has recently read Caste by Isabel Wilkerson and recommends it to everybody to read. Caste has been criticized for adhering “to the antiracist and Critical Race Theory narratives that have ascended to the forefront of racial discourse” and being a “grievance narrative” that perpetuates the "myth of white depravity and black victimhood."

- ◆ Richardson was asked what the last book was she read, Richardson stated Caste, written by Isabel Wilkerson.

INTERVIEWER: Can you tell me what is the last book you read?

RICHARDSON: Caste, by Isabel uh Wilkerson, and it's.. I recommend it to everybody. It will make you look so different at our society and where it is and how it got here.

INTERVIEWER: I would double that. That book, I think about it every day, every day.

RICHARDSON: Yes, yes.

INTERVIEWER: As a matter of fact, it was thinking about it last night. It is something happened last night, and it was in the news, and I was just like, here we are, we're just..

RICHARDSON: I know it's, and it's so well written and plain for anybody to understand, so yes, I definitely recommend that one.

Mothers Against Greg Abbott YouTube, “Dawn Richardson for Texas House District 54” 02/21/2026 timestamp 4:00

- ◆ The Independent Review described the book as:

Unlike Warmth [Wilkerson's previous book], which tells a powerful history of the atrocities committed against black people, Caste adheres to the antiracist and Critical Race Theory narratives that have ascended to the forefront of racial discourse.

<https://www.independent.org/tir/2020-21-winter/caste/>

- ◆ The Manhattan Institute review was also scathing:

Isabel Wilkerson's Caste: The Origins of Our Discontents is a compelling fable, told by an expert storyteller. A recipient of the Pulitzer Prize in journalism for her feature writing in the New York Times and author of a previous prize-winning bestseller on the Great Migration, The Warmth of Other Suns (2010), Wilkerson aims to awaken American blacks to the arbitrary caste hierarchy pressing upon them and to open the eyes of white oppressors to their unearned privilege. Forcing whites to acknowledge their bias and compassionately listen to the pain of African Americans, she believes, will free all Americans from the prison of caste once and for all. Wilkerson builds her case with vivid images and anecdotes, interlacing the plight of individuals with her own experiences of racism. She wastes little time on counterarguments.

As literature, Caste is a triumph; as social science, it is a disaster. That Caste was feted in leading publications like the New York Times (“an instant American classic”) and the Washington Post (“powerful, illuminating”), was picked for Oprah’s Book Club (“Magnificent. Profound. Eye-Opening. Sobering. Hopeful”), and is now slated to be turned into a feature film for Netflix tells us more about our cultural elite than about racial stratification. When it comes to race, smart people suspend disbelief to worship idols, dispensing with the usual standards of evidence.

...If Wilkerson’s narrow sketch of American history occupied a tiny corner of academia, it would be of little concern. Unfortunately, her writing perpetuates the myth of white depravity and black victimhood which has conquered the hive mind of today’s cultural elite. No wonder that the share of white liberals saying racism is “a big problem” jumped, after 2014, from 40%, where it had long been, to over 80%, where it stands today. This Great Awakening, based on the myth of the Second Nadir, fuels political division and harms black Americans.

Am I exaggerating? Nearly half of “very liberal” Americans think that over 1,000 unarmed black people were killed by police in 2019—compared to the actual figure of 13 to 27. Eight in 10 black Biden voters and 7 in 10 whites who say “white Republicans are racist” think a young black man is more likely to be shot by the police than to die in a traffic accident—in fact they are around ten times more likely to be killed by a car than a police bullet. Not only does the selective narrative peddled by Wilkerson annoy whites and police who resent being smeared with the misdeeds of a few bad apples, it actively harms black people by heightening their threat perceptions. The Black Lives Matter (BLM) movement, which drinks heavily from the same wellsprings, advocated defunding the police—leading to a major loss of black life. One study found that in places where BLM marches took place during 2014-19, there was a 10% higher murder rate than in places without BLM marches, costing thousands of black lives. Cities like Chicago and Minneapolis are suffering a wave of violence since the killing of George Floyd which has set their crime rates soaring to 1990s levels.

The defeatist outlook which Wilkerson’s book embodies disempowers blacks. In one study I conducted, black respondents who read a passage from Ta-Nehisi Coates, a leading purveyor of Wilkerson’s worldview, were 15 points less likely to say they could make their life plans work out than blacks who were not exposed to his hyperbolic narrative of white threats to black bodies.

The United States today is not a racist country by world-historical standards. Compared with its past, and other nations, the reverse is true. What is particularly unusual about America is the decontextualized animus directed by much of its cultural elite against its ethnic majority. Caste talks a lot about empathy, but, as psychologist Paul Bloom has observed, empathy is a poor guide for morality because it tends to be applied selectively and leads to the demonization of supposed perpetrator groups. Advocates of lynching drew on empathy for white women to demonize black men. Wilkerson calls for empathy for black people while demonizing white men and conservatives, especially the working class, whom she portrays in cartoonish fashion: “He smelled of beer and tobacco. He was wearing a cap like the men at the rallies who wanted to make America great again.”

America did indeed have a racial caste system until the mid-1960s and its effects still negatively impact African Americans. Like anti-Semitism, racism has declined but not disappeared. But racism, as many black dissident intellectuals note, is not the main problem holding back African Americans. The grievance narrative which pretends America is locked in a racial hierarchy is both misleading and harmful to black progress.

I went to a meet and greet out in Rogers, and I was talking to this gentleman, and he asked me what I stood for, and I told him I was against vouchers, and I said I was for women's rights, and then when I got to affordable health care, he reached out, shook my hand, and says, "Okay, I can't vote for you, and I said, "Why, sir? and he said, "Because you just said you believed in government-run health care, where you get to pick where we don't get to pick our own doctor, and I said I didn't say that, I said affordable health care, and so when we talk through it, he goes, oh well, that's what he believed in, and so at the end of it, I said, see, you misjudged me, didn't you? He said, yes ma'am, I did, I said, see, this is why we have to listen to each other and talk to each other, you'll find that we're more alike than we are different. And he reached out, and he gave me a great big hug, and he said, "You are absolutely right, ma'am. He said, "Now, he said, "I thought I knew I was going to vote. He said, "But now I got to go home and really think about it. And that's what that's what I want.

Awkward. Richardson did an interview with a local news channel that was uploaded without editing. Footage shows Richardson awkwardly standing in front of the camera and telling the interviewer what she wants to talk about, all with loud construction noise in the background.

♦ Richardson (segment begins 26:45):

So, obviously, they're working, but we need to make sure you know. Hey, okay, you're here, you know? How did you get here? If you didn't come in right, hey, let's get it right. We need to, we need to add more borders, border patrols, we need more judges, so that the process goes a lot quicker when these folks come in, and we can assess quicker whether they should be here allowed in, or do they need to go back. But it needs to be fair. It needs to be fair, and we don't need to be separating families. I'm sorry, I don't believe in separation of families. Children need to, you know, we can't, we, we claim we care so much about kids, and why are we separating kids from their families?

And the biggest thing for me, too, is, please, let's look at these folks as people, they're immigrants, illegal or otherwise, they're immigrants, they're not illegal aliens, they're human beings who, for whatever reason, think they're going to have a better life here. What does that say about us? What does that say about us?

Richardson thinks people shouldn't care about illegal immigrants coming here because they are working and some of them come on planes and cars.

◆ Richardson (segment begins 24:30):

Well, one, we, I'm, you know, we're in Central Texas, so you know, we, what a lot of people here, here in this area is based on what they hear in the news. Is there an immigration problem again? Because there's so much going on out there, some people will say yes, there are others who say no. I think it is up to our federal government to pass a. A bill, one that they already had that was stopped from being passed, and apparently had everything in there that most of the conservatives wanted. I mean, there's no one bill that's ever going to fit everybody, but you know, work on it. Let's get that passed, and let's look at what's necessary to do that. We also need to work at, look at why are all these people trying to come, what are they fleeing from, and we need to work with those governments, so that these folks don't want to leave home, that they want to stay in their own countries. Well, we are built on immigration, this is a country of immigrants now. Yes, some folks have been here a couple of generations, but when we look back, we are a country of immigrants, so we do want common sense immigration. Yeah, I don't want anybody coming in willy nilly, you know, but you got people coming in on the East Coast, on planes, etc. You got folks coming from the north, you know, in cars. Immigration is happening everywhere, except, you know, not just the southern border, where all the attention is being focused, you know. Those are those, those folks are not just the only immigrants we have, and when they do come to our cities, and all many of them are here because they want to work, they want a better life. Okay, when most of them you don't even hear from after they get here because they are just trying to fit in and do the best for their families and work. I mean, you think about all the ice raids, where do they normally occur at a work location? So, obviously, they're working, but we need to make sure you know. Hey, okay, you're here, you know? How did you get here? If you didn't come in right, hey, let's get it right.

Richardson on raising the minimum wage and fast food jobs having a living wage: “Oh, and I love this one. Well, they wanted to make more money, they would have gone to college. So, then, if everybody goes to college, who's going to do those jobs?”

◆ Richardson (segment begins 28:00):

Ooh, first of all, Texas is an at-will state, so we got a problem right there. I would love to see unions be able to collectively bargain with large corporations with employers' rights. Yes, I believe that the minimum wage should be raised, but more importantly, I would - I would love to see employees do that on their own. I've had this, this fundamental discussion with, with folks on, well, don, if they raise the minimum wage, I won't be able to afford to eat out, and I would, I looked at him and said, "Now, how does that sound? Want to suppress another human being for your comfort? I said, "So, are they not supposed to be able to live and survive so that you can have a steak? I mean, really, talk to me on this. Well, the minimum wage, those are those are supposed to be teenage jobs. I said, "Okay, so you don't want a coffee in the morning or at 12 in the afternoon when kids are supposed to be at school, right? I said, "Those are adults working in those jobs, so that you can have your coffee at 567, in the morning, or you can have your fast food at 12 noon. You know, children are supposed to be in school at that time. So, are you telling me those adults don't deserve a living wage? Oh, and I love this one. Well, they wanted to make more money, they would have gone to college. So, then, if everybody goes to college, who's going to do those jobs? As you know, this is this is the melting point, we all are, we all of our jobs are valuable. See, this is the thing we got to realize that every piece of this is valuable. It's all what keeps our economy going, it all keeps our area going, our cities. You've got to have people in all positions and. For that you need to pay them, so they can live there.

Who does Richardson look up to for immigration policy?

Why AOC of course. Richardson states “it’s not about illegal immigration” and shares a clip of AOC stating that temporary protective status (TPS) or student visas being revoked or allowed to expire is about attacking “documented” immigrants. Well, if their documentation runs out and they are not allowed to be in the country, then they would be illegal immigrants at that point.

Richardson attacks black conservatives. Richardson was “shaking her head” when she posted a graphic circling black Republican Byron Donalds refusing to vote for a symbolic leftist resolution “condemning white supremacy” and specifically the “Great Replacement” theory, meanwhile Democrats celebrate that white people are going to become a minority.

◆ Richardson posted this racist graphic with SMH – “shaking my head.”

<https://www.instagram.com/p/CpuNk-Isjna/>

- ◆ Great Replacement Theory is not really theory anymore it simply describes a reality that western countries are “experiencing a deliberate demographic shift due to immigration and multiculturalism.” Unless one thinks immigration policy happens by accident, you can’t really argue that the theory hasn’t been born out to be true. The demographic shift in Western countries is undeniable. In fact liberals celebrate it, including Joe Biden:

Great Replacement Theory (white replacement theory)

Great Replacement Theory, also known as White Replacement Theory, is an ethno-nationalist concept suggesting that Western nations with predominantly White populations are experiencing a deliberate demographic shift due to immigration and multiculturalism, resulting in the "replacement" of their original populations with people of color. This theory, which has roots in earlier racist ideologies, gained prominence in the early 21st century largely through the writings of French author Renaud Camus, who articulated his concerns about demographic changes in Europe in his 2012 book "Le Grand Remplacement." The theory has found a following among White nationalists, alt-right supporters, and some conservative political figures in North America and Europe.

Flashback: Biden praised ‘constant,’ ‘unrelenting’ stream of immigration into US

Biden made the comments in 2014 and 2015.

By Adam Shaw · Fox News

Published December 12, 2020 8:33pm EST

President-elect Joe Biden, during the Obama administration, said the U.S. benefits from a “constant” and “unrelenting” stream of immigration -- and that those with white European heritage becoming a minority in the U.S. is "a source of our strength."

Biden, then the vice president, made the comments at a 2015 White House summit on “Countering Violent Extremism.” In those remarks Biden described the U.S. as a nation of immigrants and a “melting pot.”

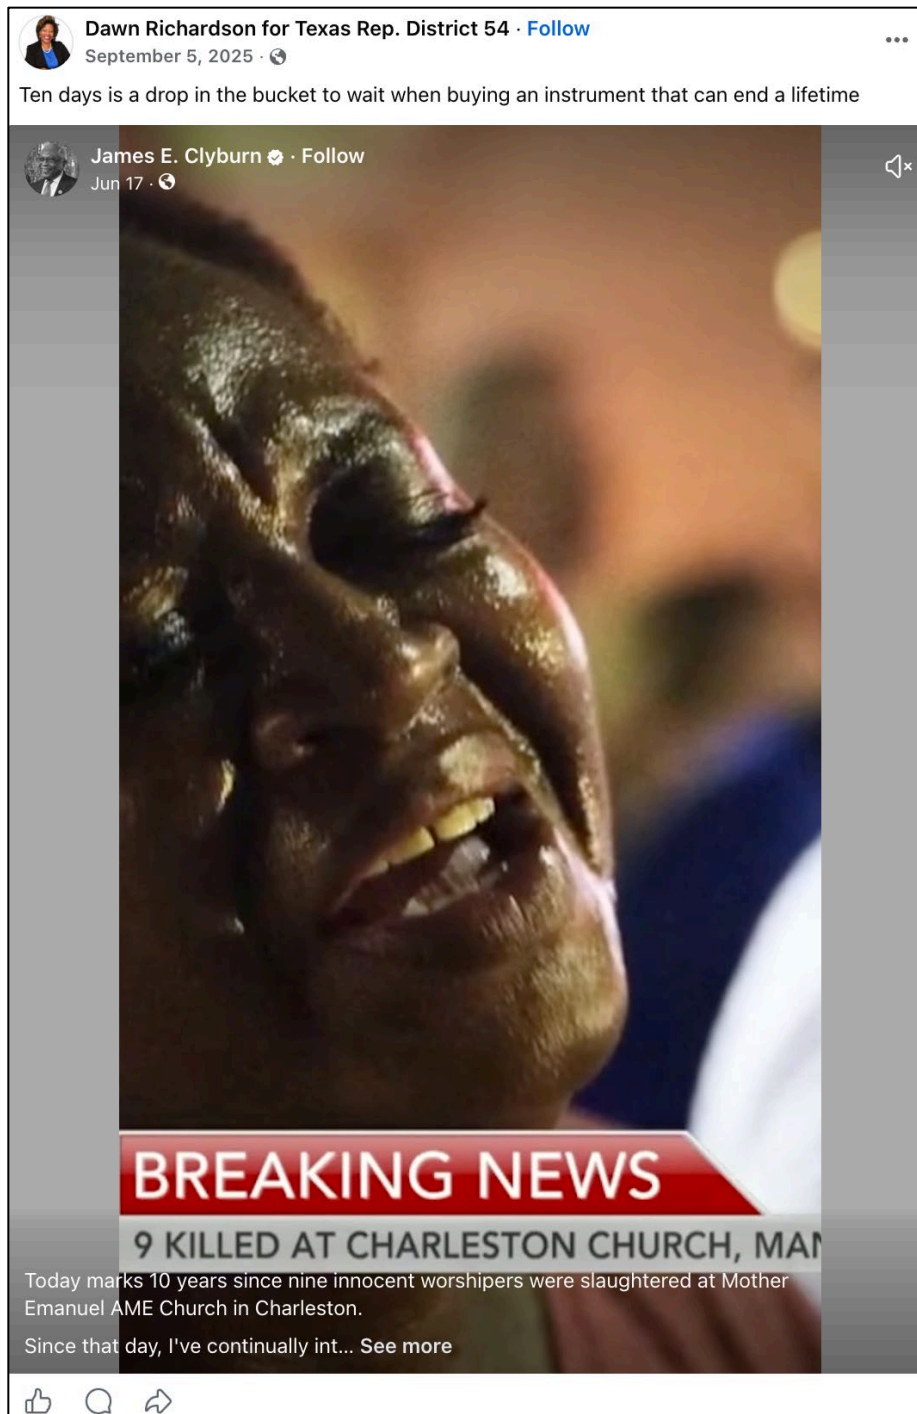

"It is the ultimate source of our strength, it is the ultimate source of who we are, what we become," he told roundtable participants. "It started all the way back in the late 1700s. There has been a constant, unrelenting stream of immigration, not in little trickles but in large numbers."

Background and Career

Megan Hull is the daughter of Blair Hull, a Chicago-based investor who was a member of a “card-counting” group of blackjack players in the 1970s. Partially with his winnings from gambling, Hull launched the Hull Trading Company, which he would later sell to Goldman Sachs for $531 million. Hull later used this money to found the Hull Family Foundation and to self-fund a campaign in the 2004 U.S. Senate election in Illinois, coming in third place in the Democratic primary with 10 percent of the vote, losing to future President Barack Obama. ⁴

Blair Hull’s four children, Megan, Kristin, Courtney, and Jeff, at one point all sat on the Hull Family Foundation board. Megan, Courtney, and Jeff were still on the foundation board as of 2023. ^{5 6}

In 2006, Megan Hull co-founded the Secretary of State Project, an effort sponsored by members of the Democracy Alliance and the personal fortune of left-of-center donor and businessman George Soros, to elect senior state elections officials, typically state secretaries of state, from the Democratic Party. The Secretary of State Project lost five of the seven races it targeted in 2010, with the only victories coming from incumbents in California and Minnesota. ⁷

According to her biography on the now-defunct organization’s website, in 2004, prior to her work at the Secretary of State Project, she “was a Project Director for Democracy Reform at the Center for Civic Participation” and “in 2004, she was a Co-Director of the coalition that investigated polling place problems and vote counting irregularities in Ohio and New Mexico.” ⁸

Federal Election Commission donation filings list Hull as a self-employed consultant in Washington, D.C. ⁹

2025 was a year of political engagement for me. I didn't realize just how true this was until I was scrolling back through my photos this evening. Direct contact with elected officials. Public comment. Educating voters. Planning and participating in protests, wherever I happened to be when they occurred. Attending local governmental meetings. Community building. Literally whatever I could squeeze in, I did.

2025 was a fucking disaster, but definitely not because I didn't try. And that's really all I can expect of myself.

Tomorrow, I turn 48. I've decided that is close enough to 50 to officially enter my "Cranky Old Lady" era. Consider yourself warned. 😬

This afternoon, I had a blast covering the BCTDW table with my friend Deanna at the Greatest Little Pride in Texas, hosted by Central Texas Pride Community Center. Enjoyed being table neighbors with Indivisible Centex! Saw my two favorite 2026 TX House candidates -- Dawn Richardson (HD-54) and Amelia Rabroker (HD-55) there. Funny ... no incumbent TX House candidates from these districts chose to show their support. 🙄 Met a ton of organizations providing amazing services for the LGBTQIA+ community. Collected SO MANY fun stickers! A splendid time was had.

Richardson: “Some people want to say, oh, let's just get rid of gas and oil. I mean, that's going to eventually happen.”

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_OVFkey3-ts; video archived here

- ◆ Richardson was asked, “Texas is a leader in energy production. What is your stance on balancing traditional energy industry and the growth of renewable energy in District 54?”
- ◆ Richardson (segment begins 31:25)

First of all, I don't think you have to have a one off, you know? Some people want to say, oh, let's just get rid of gas and oil. I mean, that's going to eventually happen. Let's just, let's just keep it up the way we're using our sources. Everything can be finite. What's renewable is sun energy, wind energy, etc. So, why not harness and use both? We need to think about the emissions that are happening in our atmosphere. You know, we talk about all these respiratory ailments that are doubling in number, and you're seeing more and more asthmatics, and etc. Well, there's a consequence to all of these emissions going in our atmosphere. We are having a water problem, you know. Folks are getting very concerned about a water shortage because of the growth in Central Texas. Again, we have to come up with ways to conserve what we have to reuse what we have, so using that, you know, backdrop. Yes, let us look at using wind power and solar power. It's not going to happen overnight. Nobody's going to come along and take away anybody's gas guzzling car overnight, but we do have to look at the future. We do have to say, hey, let's look at what we have. How can we use it better? How can we even improve gas cars where they're utilizing less gas and going further? You know, this is the beauty of innovation. You know, we there should not be the scare tactics that we have to have a one off. I do believe that both can be in existence at the same time, which they are right now, and over time you might be using more with one or the other, but even those industries who are in the gas and oil are looking at ways to expand their productions of wind and solar, so we need to stop being afraid of change. I remember we went from a horse and buggy to cars, right? And folks were a little concerned about that, you know. Folks forget about all these changes that we've had, you know, over the past 100 years, and I'm more than sure this was one of them. I'm more than sure this conversation you and I are having in 50 years, people will be like, "Well, why did it take us so long? Yeah, yeah, simple as that. So, but yeah, we, we're having, we're the issue here for us right now is looking at water as well.

Dawn Richardson completed Ballotpedia's Candidate Connection survey in 2024. The survey questions appear in bold and are followed by Richardson's responses.

Who are you? Tell us about yourself.

Dawn Richardson is a retired educator with 39 years of service, the last 27 years in Killeen, Texas. She has taught 7th - 12th grade science and math, coached basketball, and cheerleading, supported student engagement as student activities coordinator, sponsoring more clubs than she has space to list.

Dawn started teaching in 1981 at her high school Martin Luther High School. She has taught in New York, Hawaii where she met and married her husband of 34 years, Louisiana, and completed her career in Texas. During those years, she earned the accolades Teacher of The Year, Teacher of the Month, Teacher of the Week, High School Blood Drive Coordinator of the Year, and 2015 Administrator of The Year by the STEM Program at Shoemaker High School. Dawn has been the secretary, vice president, and president of the Killeen Education Association, member of KAASBE, Black Caucus Chair for TSTA, member of NEA, and NSTA, to name a few. Dawn is an active member of her community. Currently, she is the President of the Exchange Club of Killeen, Community Advisory Committee Member for the Rock Rose Foundation, Youth Director for Greater Peace MBC, Alternate Director for TSTA-Retired Region 12, and actively works to register people in our community to vote. Dawn is married to Michael and is the proud mom of Killeen ISD graduates, Dayna, Baylor University grad '12 and Mycah, St. Johns University grad '17, and grandmom to pups, Persie and Shadow.

Please list below 3 key messages of your campaign. What are the main points you want voters to remember about your goals for your time in office?

- * Oppose all school voucher plans. Vouchers will weaken the public school systems further and will not ultimately help those students that those who support them say they will
 - Support fully funding public school system to the average national level or higher.
 - Support all educational staff with higher wages and benefits
 - Build in a COLA that is triggered by measurable economic factors and not by the whim of the legislature
 - Support parental choice within the public school system.
 - * Support reproductive rights and freedoms
 - Support maternal health
 - Support infant and child health
- Healthcare should be affordable for all citizens and their healthcare should be between themselves and their doctors.
- * Support veteran health care
 - Support veteran tax exemptions
 - Support communities where veterans live

What areas of public policy are you personally passionate about?

Public Education, Women's Rights, Healthcare. Every child has a right to a quality education, no matter their status. Every woman should be able to govern and control her health decisions, and every American should be able to afford to see a doctor, afford their medicines, and not run the risk of financial ruin

Who do you look up to? Whose example would you like to follow, and why?

My mother, Barbara Jordan, and Nichelle Nichols (Uhura). My mom was the epitome of grace and class. Always dressed professionally and spoke so clearly. She was also a supervisor at Pan American Airlines in the late 1950's. She supervised a department of 300 and was one of only 3 Black women in the department.

The moment that I heard Barbara Jordan speak, I was memorized. She was so eloquent! She is the person that got me into politics. I remember watching and listening to her speak at the Democratic Convention and how they wanted her to be on the ticket as the Vice President which she turned down. I made it a point to tune in every time she was on TV.

The same with Nichelle Nichols. Here was a beautiful intelligent Black woman, being treated as an equal and not an object. Her character let us little girls know that we can be smart and beautiful, as well as be respected.

What qualities do you possess that you believe would make you a successful officeholder? ▼

I am first and foremost approachable. As a former coach, I know how to work with and motivate people. As a classroom teacher, I know that all of us have unique talents and skills, and how to motivate and use those skills. I can work with all people as I respect the opinions of others. We don't always have to agree but we also don't have to be disagreeable. I went to a meet and greet and this gentleman asked me what my positions were. When I told him, he immediately said, no offense just know that I won't be voting for you. I asked him why and it started a dialogue. He thought I was saying one thing and I explained in detail what I was saying. At the end, I said to him, "you misjudged me. You assumed you knew what I was about without hearing anything else from me." He agreed and apologized. I then said "this is why we do these meet and greets so folks get to talk to us and truly hear what we are about". He agreed, apologized again, hugged me, and wished me luck. Now I don't know if he will vote for me or not, but I know that I gave him a lot to think about and that is a step in the right direction in healing the divide that we have in this country.

What do you believe are the core responsibilities for someone elected to this office? ▼

To present and represent the best interests of my constituents. Too many elected officials promise one thing and then when elected, fight for their self interests or the interests of those in their circle. I intend to break that trend and represent what my constituents tell me through town halls and surveys, what is the priorities in our district. This is not about me but "we".

What legacy would you like to leave? ▼

That I fought for what the people want, not my personal wants. I want folks to say, job well done, you gave it your all. I want to be able to say that we secured a school system that is fully funded and functioning for the majority of our children. I want to leave a Public School system that teachers want to come to, as opposed to leaving after 5 years. I want to bring community leaders and businesses into the conversation of affordability when it comes to housing in the communities that they live in. I want to leave our teachers and public service retirees in better shape with cost of living raises tied to inflation. Last but not least I want to work on our healthcare system. Every citizen has the right to affordable healthcare. Healthy citizens are more productive. More productive citizens build a strong economy. My legacy will be that I worked for the people, not for myself.

What is the first historical event that happened in your lifetime that you remember? How old were you at the time? ▼

The assassination of John F. Kennedy. I was almost 4 and I remember my mom and grandma just crying their eyes out and explaining how he was going to approve civil rights. They were upset because they didn't know what was going to happen to all of that work of Dr. King and the movement. It was one of many moments that I watched with them.

What was your very first job? How long did you have it? ▼

Very first job was an assistant swim instructor to little children. Had this job for two summers. The head instructor told me that she never wanted the parents in the pool with the children because most times, they slow or hinder the child's progress. I learned this first hand when I had a young boy tell me that when he was little he had a very bad accident in the water. Now this child was three. Then his mom rushes up and says the same thing. I asked her to sit over there (so he could not see or hear her). In less than 3 days, he was jumping in 4 feet of water and by the end of the class, into the 20ft diving pool. The biggest take away was that parental attitudes affect their children's attitudes.

What is your favorite book? Why? ▼

"I know Why The Caged Bird Sings". I read it when I was in 9th grade. So many emotions but the theme that stuck with me is no matter what you have gone through, you can overcome. She was so open about her life and her struggles. Her descriptions made it come to life. You felt as if you were going through it with her. I read that book in three days. I couldn't put it down. It was also the first book that introduced me to the traumas of rape.

If you could be any fictional character, who would you want to be?	▼
Uhura from Star Trek. Intelligent and beautiful, and working in space. She worked on the bridge and was an officer. Captain always treated her with the same respect as the rest of his officers.
What was the last song that got stuck in your head?	▼
Ain't No Stopping Us Now. I have made it my theme song. Love the message. "Don't let anything get in your way"
What is something that has been a struggle in your life?	▼
A struggle in my life that I tend to over think my actions. I will do something or say something, and think about it over and over, whether it was right or wrong, or how I could have said or done it better. Even when everyone is saying that it was great, I still tend to go over it many times in my head.
Is there a particular legislator, past or present, whom you want to model yourself after?	▼
Barbara Jordan. She was a statesman who worked across the aisle to get things done. She was a unifying force in the Democratic party.
Are you interested in running for a different political office (for example, the U.S. Congress or governor) in the future?	▼
Right now, I want to concentrate all of my energies on the position that I want to attain and do the best for the people in my district
Both sitting legislators and candidates for office hear many personal stories from the residents of their district. Is there a story that you've heard that you found particularly touching, memorable, or impactful?	▼
A retired teacher I talked to told me that she brings home less than $1000 a month and how if it wasn't for her neighbor paying bills and buying food for her, she would be homeless as it is only her and her daughter and they barely can afford the rent, let alone anything else. The married couple of 15 years with a 12 year old son, gets pregnant. They are told that the baby has died. Because she was 7 1/2 months pregnant, they would have to wait for the baby to pass naturally as she was past the date for an abortion. After a week and she started getting sick, the husband drove her to a state to get an abortion to save her life. A retired police officer is wanting us to do something about retirement benefits because when they retire, their health insurance is extremely high because they do not pay into a system like teachers do with TRS. However, many teachers complain about the cost of their healthcare as well. So many parents complain about how their child's teacher has too many students in their class. They always praise the teacher for how well they are doing but why doesn't the system hire more teachers. The young teacher in tears because she has to leave her inner city school due to the rise in her rent. She loves her students but can no longer afford to live anywhere close to her school. This older gentleman who isn't taking the medicines that he needs because they cost too much and wouldn't be able to pay his rent. The lady who told me that she almost lost her house due to her health care costs. She said that the only thing that saved her was the ACA.
Tell us your favorite joke.	▼
Richard Pryor: Two men were on a bridge and seeing all of that water made them want to (go to the bathroom). So they decided to go.. The first guy says that this water is cold. The second one said "and it's deep too". First heard that Freshman year of college. Didn't get it until Senior year!
Should the legislature oversee or grant the use of emergency powers?	▼
This would have to be an extreme life or death situation with oversight by all three branches of government. No one person should have that authority. It should be debated and the voting public should have input. Absolute power corrupts absolutely. Should be done by a 80% or higher vote of all legislators.

What is the first bill you would introduce if elected?

Codify that no public funds can be use for private education. Public education should be fully funded to the national average or higher. Along with that, the minimum teacher pay should be at the national level, with state funding going to supplement that in districts who are cash poor. Most new teachers leave the profession within the first 5 years of teaching. Among the many factors that are cited is affordability of the area in which they live. Teachers should not have to work two or three jobs to survive. Working extra jobs, does affect their performance in the classroom. Revisit the Recapture statutes to make sure that monies are being distributed fairly and that those school districts that in need are the districts receiving those funds. However, the lionshare of that funding should come directly from the state. There are districts due to their tax base, could fully fund these mandates if they were able to keep the majority of their tax revenue in district. The state then, should step up and fill the gaps in those districts who are tax poor.

Dawn Richardson
 November 17, 2025 ·

I filed to run for State Representative H.D. 54... again!

Why am I running?
 First and foremost, I'm not in this for me, I'm in this for we!

Texas deserves a fully funded public education on par with or better than the national average. For too long, and our students are short changed due to limited resources, staffing shortages, overcrowding, our educators are underpaid, and our retirees cannot live off their pensions.

Texans deserve Affordable and Accessible Healthcare. Our rural neighbors, should not have to travel hours to get to the nearest clinic or hospital. No one should go, broke, lose their home, or choose between medicine and eating. All Texans deserve to have the healthcare of their choice. All of us deserve the right to make individual healthcare choices, and those of us who are not their doctors need to stay out of the exam rooms and the decisions made in those rooms.

Our veterans deserve to have their benefits, honored and not stripped away. Too many of our veterans are homeless or dependent on SNAP, and now may lose the healthcare that they need due to reductions at the VA.

We deserve to have our county's water and resources protected.

We deserve representation that lives among us, works among us, can relate to our everyday struggles, and will fight for what is important to us! We deserve ... A New Dawn

In 2026 all of these gains are actively being targeted. Several professional degrees in fields dominated by women have been downgraded by the Trump admin. so federal student loans are capped. They are trying to get rid of birth control, got rid of DEI, and still has not extended protections of working women who get pregnant.

Owner, Educators Retirement Specialists, Inc.

July 22, 2011, Gary worked with Dawn on the same team

Dawn exemplifies the meaning of leadership and I am very pleased to be able to provide her with a recommendation. Having worked with her since 1997 while she was President of the Killeen Educator's Association (KEA), I was able to see first-hand her ability to manage multiple tasks, personalities and situations that would result in a win-win for all involved. Not only did she manage the needs of hundreds of educators who were members of KEA, negotiated with district management to address their individual and group needs and was the spokesperson for KEA, which resulted in substantial growth of the organization, but she was also working in the very demanding position of Instructional Specialist in Technology at Fairway Middle School. All of this accomplished with genuine dedication to the development and improvement of programs and systems that would benefit all she worked with. Dawn has an innate ability to bring people together to solve issues, develop trusting relationships, mentor those around her and provide an example that others aspire to.

Ted Smith ✓ · 3rd+

COO of Salado ISD

February 13, 2010, Ted worked with Dawn on the same team

Dawn is an invaluable resource for Shoemaker High School. Her wealth of knowledge with students, technology applications, and educational law have dramatically improved the SHS admin team.
